Sandwiches: where they came from

By: Charles Krott, On The Road Again

The origin of sandwiches is not well known. There is no truth to the rumor that this American favorite was named after a gambling nobleman named Sandwich who couldn't leave his cards long enough to pick up a knife and fork.

New evidence recently found near Beverly Hills points out that nomads about 1000 BC used to go to wars over sandwich recipes.

Some fascinating carvings on the walls of their mansions have been discovered that document that sandwiches were the main food staple in those early days.

Alexander the Great's armies lived on rations of sandwiches while conquering Asia Minor.

Rumors are that Anthony fell for Cleopatra over a late-night sandwich she made for him in pocket bread.

Marco Polo brought back the first sandwich with him from China. A gift of good will from the Great Kublai Khan. It still looked like a sandwich after a 3-year journey.

At Golden Gazebo, a variety of popular sandwiches are made fresh to order accompanied by salad or soup and french fries for a complete and satisfying meal. New sandwiches from the four corners of the world will be offered occasionally as specials. Look for them at the Golden Gazebo.

Wining and dining

By: Sport Correspondant A.J. Andretti

Golden Gazebo's wine menu is limited but very selective. An excellent choice of German, French, California, Washington, and Oregon wines leaves no room for hesitation. Champagne and fresh fruit juice cocktails are unbeatable on Saturday mornings with special omelettes.

Dear Annie Van Bugle:

Omlettes may save what is left.

DEAR ANNIE,

I love the taste of eggs, but since my spouse hates the looks of them our relationship has been under constant strain for the past 29 years. Please help us to save our marriage for better or worse. Also, please don't tell anyone I wrote you this letter.

PUSHED-TO-THE-EDGE-ON-EGGS

DEAR PUSHED-TO-THE-EDGE

If your spouse hates the sight of eggs poached, scrambled, baked, over (easy, medium, hard), sunny side up, boiled (soft, medium, hard), or plain raw, then you should try the alternative. The life-saving compromise is the OMELETTE. At Golden Gazebo, you can choose from a good selection of delicious 3-egg omelettes any time of the day (not after closing or before opening). The best thing about omelettes are you really do not need to wait for the right time. Have them for breakfast, lunch, or light dinner with wine, beer, coffee, juice or plain water.

I am worried about you two. Let me know how things turn out.

Annie

Breakfast can make or break a day

By: Richard Simson

Golden Gazebo expanded their breakfast menu to offer more variety and some lighter selections both in costs and calories. Of course we all know a good hearty breakfast never killed anyone provided some mild daily exercise is undertaken. Our chef in residence and our fitness instructor both suggest belt adjustments during breakfast to satisfy this requirement.

Gazette's editor, in an exclusive interview, said "Gazebo's breakfasts include fruit garnish and choice of toast. Some items do not come with toast," he added somberly, "but bread isn't everything."

Running is everything. If you don't believe this you shouldn't be living in the running capital of the world... or anywhere else for that matter. I am not going to bore you with benefits of running. Surely you have heard enough. But what you should know is what to do for a rewarding experience after the routine is over... try a Jogger's Nog at the Golden Gazebo. Those of us who have tried it compare it to the ecstasy we feel at the finish of a marathon.

For those of you who do the half mile at a crawl, the pleasure should be overwhelming since the ecstasy is pain free. Other refreshers on Gazebo's menu are not only as delightful, but also as healthy and satisfying. I recommend the Evening Energizer, if you insist on doing anything during the day aside from running.

The Final Fling?

By: Orsen Wales

If by now you have reached the point of no return, a few calories more should certainly not make you feel any more guilty. Desserts complement your satisfying meal.

We should remember there is always a tomorrow to start that diet and if tomorrow is not a Monday, wait till the weekend is over.

Burger Expo '82

By: Walter Crondick

Burgers are as enigmatic as apple pie. They come in all different sizes and shapes. Some are mass produced and kept warm for instant heartburn. Some are tampered with and called "choice". Some mini burgers dress up in maxi buns to impress the unsuspecting customers.

There are burgers big and thin and some are small and fat. Burgers that are practically steamed and called juicy and hot and those that are cooked on a lined grill and named broiled.

But for the connoisseur "true American Burgers" need not be so baffling. Can a burger be as inspiring as Mom's apple pie? Will the original American burger be able to survive the onslaught of the impostors and plastic tasting substitutes? The answer is "yes".

At the Golden Gazebo all burgers are 1/3 lb. pure lean ground beef cooked to order on your choice of sesame buns or onion roll. Served with choice of one: soup, salads, fruit garnish, or french fried potatoes accompanied by lettuce, tomato and dill pickles.

Something worth biting into.
