State Reps. Margie Hendriksen, Mary Burrows and Shawn Dooley, OSU chair ponder answers to the questions facing higher education during a legislative conference sponsored by the ASUO and the Oregon Student Lobby.

Students get elections advice

Student leaders learned about legislative issues as higher education received more support in a legislative conference Friday sponsored by the ASUO and the Oregon Student Lobby.

State Rep. Margie Hendriksen (D-Eugene) and Rep. Mary Burrows (R-Eugene), both candidates for the 1983 Oregon Legislature, pledged unfailing support to state colleges and universities and equally strong opposition to Ballot Measure 3 while speaking to student leaders from around the state on legislative issues.

Hendriksen, who is challenging Republican Sen. George Wingard in District 20, called the property tax limitation measure "disastrous."

The measure not only threatens higher education's share of the state general fund but "attempts to take the power away from the people," she said.

Burrows, the incumbent in the District 41 race, told the student government officers attending the conference that they should actively participate in the upcoming election.

"There is no limit to the amount of pressure you can supply. You've got legislators out there you must persuade," Burrows said.

Burrows asked the students to "get to those people outside of university districts" and change votes.

Bill Lemman, vice-chancellor of the State System of Higher Education, and Barbara Mitchell of the Oregon Education Coordinating Commission also were present at the meeting.

Lemman stressed the importance of higher education, listing research, computer programming, marketing and international trade as a few of the college programs that "contribute to the economic recovery and development of the state."
