

Incidental Fee Committee elects chair

The Incidental Fee Committee elected Bart Hill, a sophomore biology major, its 1982-83 chairer last week.

The committee elected Hill by a 5-0 vote with two abstentions.

Junior Elizabeth Fry, a journalism major, was elected vice-chairer over Jeff Nudelman, a senior political science and history major, by a 6-1 vote.

Bart Hill will take responsibility to unify and direct the committee

Hill, who hadn't planned to seek the position, said he was persuaded to run by former IFC chairer Karsten Rasmussen and by the need for an effective committee.

"There is a responsibility for the committee to be unified and directed," said Hill. "I felt I could do this," he said.

The IFC also received some advice from former chairer Rasmussen.

The committee should have a consistent policy so complaints of favoritism can be defended against, said Rasmussen.

Budget priorities should be decided now, before paperwork and time constraints plague the committee, he said.

Keeping abreast of the regulations is a must, Rasmussen said.

"Know the rules so you can prevail," he said. "Otherwise, you'll resent the people who run circles around you."

Fulbright lectureships given to English faculty

Five members of the English department faculty have been awarded Fulbright lectureships and will be lecturing abroad during the coming year.

Barbara and Christer Mossberg will spend the year as joint occupants of the Bicentennial Chair for American Studies at the University of Helsinki, Finland.

Frederick Newberry is spending fall and winter terms in the Soviet Union, lecturing on American Literature at the State University of Tbilisi in the Georgian Republic.

John Haislip will go to the University of Tubingen, Germany, from April to July on a faculty exchange with Professor Hans Borchers of that university. Borchers will teach here during spring term.

During summer semester, Ralph Salisbury will lecture at the University of Frankfurt, Germany.
