Oregon fumbles away victory

By Steve Turcotte

SEATTLE — It's incredible how the complexity of a football game can be determined by just one snap of the football.

But Saturday afternoon at Husky Stadium in Seattle, the Oregon football game against the Huskies of Washington was determined by that — just one play.

It came late in the game. With the Ducks leading the top ranked Huskies 21-17 with 14 minutes remaining in the game, Terrance Jones took a handoff and went over left guard. But waiting to meet him at the hole was Washington linebacker Ken Driscoll, who hit him like a brick wall and forced Jones to cough up the pigskin.

After 10 plays and 76 yards, the Huskies found the end zone to go ahead 24-21 on their way to an eventual 37-21 win.

"I was really surprised it was that good of a hit," said Jones of Driscoll's tackle. "It was a good stick. It makes it tough to hang onto the ball when you get it that hard."

"Jones got stuck real hard," Oregon coach Rich Brooks said. "Driscoll is a hell of a player and he really kissed him."

"There was a big swing on that play," Brooks continued. "Everything was going our way when we got the ball, then it went right back the other way when we fumbled to them."

"If we would have taken it in for the touchdown we would have been in great shape."

Regardless of the turnovers, the Ducks still played a good game against a team which is the No. 1-ranked team in the nation.

On Oregon's first series, the Ducks took the kickoff and marched 80 yards in 10 plays, highlighted by a 23-yard scoring pass from halfback Harry Billups to a leaping Osborne Thomas for the Ducks' first offensive touchdown of the game — and the season.

Brooks, understandably, felt that touchdown was special.

"That first touchdown really opened a lot of people's eyes," Brooks said. "Taking the ball right down the field and scoring did a lot for us."

The Oregon offense, which had been the brunt of many jokes after the first three games of the season for its inability to score, may have set those jokes on the shelf for the remainder of the season. Against the Huskies, the Ducks proved they did have an offense.

The Ducks rolled up 307 yards — 162 on the ground and another 145 through the air — good for three touchdowns.

Setters eighth in Provo

The Oregon women's volleyball team completed a whirlwind tour of Utah this weekend by finishing eighth out of 21 teams in the Brigham Young University Invitational.

The Ducks, who won three out of seven matches during the tournament and are now 7-4 on the season, got off to a good start in the tourney Thursday night by beating Montana State 15-8, 15-9 and upsetting 18th ranked Utah State 16-14, 15-13.

"We just had a good all-around effort from everyone," said coach Chris Voelz.

On Friday Oregon lost to Long Beach State 15-13, 5-15, 12-15 but bounced back to defeat Texas Tech 15-7, 6-15, 15-11. The Ducks then advanced to Friday night play by knocking off Long Beach 15-9 in a one-game playoff.

Unfortunately, the women lost senior team captain Anita Ensworth to an injury in that game.

In the first match Friday night, the tired Ducks lost to 13th ranked BYU 3-15, 4-15, 14-16 despite regaining the services of Stephanie Tambe, who had returned from a ligament injury.

"We played a lot of volleyball this weekend, and it started to show in that game," said Voelz. "We could have played a lot better than we did against BYU," she added.

Oregon finished up the tournament on Saturday night with losses to Southern Illinois and Utah State.
