

Hill returning to football squad, but must show he wants to stay

Oregon has gotten back the quarterback of the future, but what that exactly might be, only Dana Hill knows.

The freshman quarterback who left school and the football team Monday, has decided to return to Oregon, but must first "prove himself."

"He'll have to prove himself to his teammates and the coaches that he is willing to accept the responsibility of playing for us," said Oregon coach Rich Brooks.

"He's had problems and hopefully he'll learn from them, but we'll have to wait and see."

Currently in Los Angeles, Hill will miss the Oregon-USC game on Saturday, but will return with the team to Eugene after the game.

"Of course he's not going to step in as the first-string quarterback, he'll have to earn it, and show that he really wants it," said Brooks.

Hill had been suspended for the Washington game last weekend, after missing a team meeting. That and personality problems led Hill to leave Oregon, said Oliver Lucas, Hill's high school coach in Pomona, Calif. Lucas would not elaborate on the problems.

"I talked to him and we hashed it out and decided it was best for him to return to school," said Oliver. "He's had troubles understanding what he should do, and was unsure about whether he should have been suspended. Now he has a better understanding of what happened."

Oliver had contacted Hill after he found out that the freshman had left Eugene.

"He lived with me last year, and I help him make decisions. He trusts me. He had problems and handled them differently than he should have. He is disappointed with the way he handled it, but I think he's learned from it."

"He is a freshman, and he handled it like a freshman. He acted emotionally instead of rationally," said Lucas.

Lucas said one of the problems that Hill had was that the Oregon coaches were shielding him too much.

"They tried to protect him both in practice and in games. They didn't think a freshman could handle the pressure of big play situations."

"But Dana is a pressure player. A money player. He thrives under it, and needs it to do well."

Lucas said the coaches also kept Hill from working hard and hitting in practice, which didn't help Hill improve.

"He's like a Clydesdale, he's got to be worked to do well," said Lucas.

"I know that in college, coaches worry about quarterbacks getting hurt, but if Dana is going to do well, he has to work for it."

Notre Dame tickets available

Student tickets are still available for Oregon's football game against Notre Dame Oct. 23, but they are selling fast, according to University ticket manager Hunt Holsapple.

Students and their spouses can secure tickets to the Notre Dame game right now by purchasing a ticket package which includes tickets to Oregon's last two home games against Washington State and Arizona. The package costs $10 and can be purchased at the athletic department ticket office at McArthur Court. Individuals must have a fee card to buy student tickets.

Individual Notre Dame tickets for students will go on sale on Monday, Oct. 18, if any remain at that time.

"I hope to be sold out by that date," Holsapple said. "It's quite likely we could be. The packages are moving pretty quickly."

Individual student tickets will cost $4.50 for the Notre Dame game and $3.50 for the Washington State and Arizona games.
