Women to run at Cal meet

By Marcus Prater
Of the Emerald

What started as something cross country coach Tom Heinonen was looking forward to, has turned into an unhappy situation.

Heinonen, and his Oregon runners, are headed for the Cal Invitational. But, this season's meet isn't comparable to the annual classics of years past.

Only four teams will be participating, not the usual big field that Heinonen expected. Along with the Ducks, the University of California, Stanford and Nevada-Reno, a Big Sky Conference-team will attend. Heinonen was hoping for more.

"Looking at Cal and Nevada-Reno, they are non-factors and I'm not happy at all about that. What it comes down to is a Stanford-Oregon dual meet," he said minutes after hearing about the lack of competition.

Heinonen's unhappiness is understood. Stanford starts their cross country season well before Oregon, and the Cards start training well before their first meet.

The Ducks, on the other hand, had their first meet last Saturday at the Garrie Franklin Classic. They were not seriously challenged.

"I want them (Ducks) to face 75 or 100 runners, and have a big crowd at the starting line. That is what we'll face in district and nationals, and that is what we'd hoped for this meet," Heinonen said.

The Cal Invitational usually sports a strong field of several teams. Past participants have been Florida State, Wisconsin, Oregon State and Washington. Heinonen said there is a simple reason for the lack of a strong field.

"They're scared of us (Oregon and Stanford). It wouldn't do their people any good to go down there and get thrashed by two teams. It just wouldn't be good to get beat that badly."

Eryn Forbes (leading) and Rosa Gutierrez will lead the Duck women's cross country team into action Saturday at the Cal Invitational at Berkeley.

Heinonen is not insinuating that Oregon is in for an easy time over the hilly 5,000-meter course. Stanford soundly defeated the Ducks in last season's meet, taking four of the top six places, and have a strong group back this year.

"Stanford is much better than last year, but so are we. Stanford's training methods are not like most others. They are remarkably good at the first of the season, and they try to hang on from there," Heinonen said of the Cards.

Oregon's top two runners, Leann Warren and Kathy Hayes, will not be competing again this week. Hayes is expected to heal from a strained Achilles tendon injury in time for the Oregon Track Club Invitational Oct. 17. The status on Warren will be known in eight to 10 days, according to Heinonen.

Oregon can still field a strong team without the damaged duo. The top seven finishers from the Garrie Franklin Classic will take part, including Rosa Gutierrez and Eryn Forbes, who placed first and third respectively.

Gutierrez, a sophomore from Glendale, is a unique runner in Heinonen's eyes.

"Rosa handled the transition from high school to a big school and hot competition last fall, and was even better on the track last spring," he said. "This summer she showed she was capable of putting together successful races."

Gutierrez triumphed in eight road races this summer in the California, but as far as this season goes Heinonen said, "She is willing to do the exact workout I give her. She executes race plans to a T."

"She is also very assertive and is going in the direction of becoming a great runner in a hurry."

Gutierrez finished third in the 1982 NCAA 3,000-meters, which earned her all-American honors as a freshman. Her and continued success this season prompted Heinonen to call her, "an unique exception."

Weekend decides pennant races

Compiled from associated press reports

With only one weekend left in baseball's regular season, no one has clinched the pennant. Thursday night, the California Angels took a rest and the rest of the title contenders battled to stay alive.

Dodgers 10 - Braves 3

LOS ANGELES — Dusty Baker's two-run single highlighted a four-run outburst in the seventh inning Thursday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers pulled away for a 10-3 victory over Atlanta that put them within one game of the Braves in the National League West.

Giants 7 - Astros 6

San Francisco — Pinch-hitter Ron Pruitt

drove in two runs with a bases-loaded bloop single to center field — his first hit of the season — climaxing the San Francisco Giants' second comeback of the game and giving them a vital 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros Thursday night.

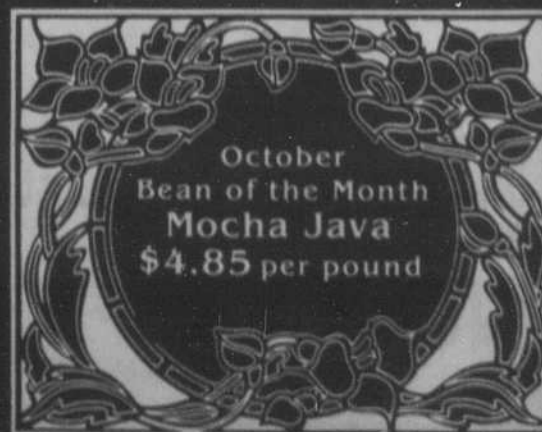

The Giants trail first-place Atlanta by one game in the National League West race.

Royals 11 - A's 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Willie Aikens hit a grand slam homer and a three-run shot Thursday night to power the Kansas City Royals past Oakland 11-4 and further tighten the American League West race.

The victory shaved first-place California's lead to two games with three left to play.
