

Kenny Loggins hits campus to rock'n' roll

Kenny Loggins is a name well known in rock music, be it as a single artist or teaming up with the likes of Stevie Nicks of Fleetwood Mac or ex-Buffalo Springfield member Jim Messina.

Recently, Loggins issued a new album "High Adventure" which is being hailed as a meticulous piece of pop rock.

The album cut getting the most radio airplay is "Don't Fight It", a teaming of Loggins with Steve Perry of Journey in a straight forward rocker.

This Saturday, Oct. 16, the EMU Cultural Forum and the John Bauer Concert Company will bring Kenny Loggins to MacArthur Court for a concert that should prove memorable. The concert begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are still available at $9 and $10 and can be purchased at the EMU Main Desk.

Kenny Loggins, formerly of Loggins and Messina, treats concert goers to songs from his newest album and perhaps some oldies, this Saturday in MacArthur Court.

IFC contemplates zero-funding program limits, new EMU hours

University programs should consider obtaining a broader base of funding, said Jeff Nudelman, Incidental Fee Committee member, at the Thursday night IFC meeting. Nudelman noted that despite the enrollment decline there has been an increase in ASUO-funded programs.

"I think a lot of our funding is getting out of hand," Nudelman said.

Nudelman said he doesn't want to limit the number of programs, but the number of funded programs has grown from 65 to 86 in two years.

"It's gotten to the point where 10 P.E. majors form a Physical Education Students Union and we feel obligated to fund it," he said.

Nudelman said the committee should consider the benefit the University-community derives from each programs before funding it. The IFC should work at making ASUO-funded organizations stronger without relying on more incidental fee money, he said.

"I, for one, don't feel we should raise incidental fees this year," Nudelman added.

The IFC should also consider zero-funding weak programs to "keep them from limping along," he said.

Nudelman's remarks were marked for further discussion. They do not represent the policies of the IFC, IFC chairer Bart Hill said.

In other business, the committee reversed a decision made last week to take money from unallocated reserves to keep the EMU open 1 1/2 hours extra during Dead Week. The IFC unanimously tabled the motion until the EMU administration submits a financial statement disclosing whether the EMU can fund the extra hours.

The committee approved the funding last week in a 4-2 vote.

Hill, who voted against the request last week, said he didn't like the process under which the monies were approved.

The IFC unanimously approved a policy statement saying the committee supports the goal of keeping the EMU open extra hours and urged the EMU Board to meet with the IFC to resolve the funding issue.

The committee also approved $131 from the surplus fund to pay for a Legal Services parking spot. The IFC is contractually bound to pay for the spot, said Sheila Schain, ASUO budget director.
