New Wave

Leslie's New Wave outfit is spectacularly put together for $74.35. Stylish and imaginative New Wavers hold a big advantage in the leeway they exercise to combine new with old, cheap with expensive, store-bought with used and outrageous with basic.

It's a no-holds-barred-look which can show the extremes of taste, from tawdry to tasteful. It's also very basic, simple and geometric. Just using black and a little metallic and making the right new moves may be all it takes. A knockout outfit can be pulled together inexpensively.

Leslie has another edge: cutting and bleaching her own hair. She also adds five of her own earrings.

Her clothes: black cotton v-neck t-shirt with metal studs ($15.50), 100 percent cotton straight-legged black pants ($24.95), leather metal-studded belt ($11.95), plastic secret agent glasses ($6.95), soft black leather adjustable bracelet with mini-studs ($10), low soft leather oxfords ($5).

Prep

Prep fashions don't change much, so Beth's clothes will be stylish as long as they last. Her outfit is bottom-line, no frills, basic — a good investment at $75.60. And preppies know all about good investments.

With this outfit, the only other things a perfect prepie needs are Daddy's charge card, a good Anglo name and a bitchin' GPA.

Her clothes: burgundy Paletto cords with leather belt ($35); also in black, grey, navy, tan and duck green. Her pink 100 percent cotton Izod shirt ($23) comes in colors to match your car: green, red, fuschia, purple, maroon, blue, grey, yellow, tan, beige. Beth's burgundy Shetland wool crew-neck pullover ($15.60) also comes in every bright tasteful color imaginable. The classic way to finish this look is with a tortoise shell headband ($2).

Beth came prepared with her own loafers, in which she put French centimes instead of the traditional pennies. She also added gold earrings.

New York

It wasn't often the vogue and sophisticated looker stepped out before the performing arts center changed the local fashion tune. Now, people are dressing up unabashedly. Black tie is in for both men and women.

A dressy dress, especially in black-and-white, will probably be worn more than once this season.

Don't try dressing it down. Take all the drama it has and wear it in Eugene, not New York.

Gina's clothes: Black-and-white tuxedo dress in 100 percent nylon-polyester designed by Marie Claire. It features pearl buttons in the back of a standup collar, front ruffled yoke and ruffles on the sleeves. It's pleated discreetly in front and is most appropriately worn with its own narrow tie-belt ($70). She also wears a pair of barely black, nude heel sheer stockings ($3.50).

Gina added some touches of her own, a plastic fuschia comb to hold back her hair, and a pair of shoes.
