Three vie for representative seat

by Michele Matassa
 Of the Emerald

Three candidates bid for the District 40 representative seat yesterday in an ASUO/SUAB sponsored debate. The seat, vacated by Margie Hendriksen in her try for the state senate, is up for grabs.

Republican Robert O'Reilly, Democrat Carl Hosticka and Citizens' Party member Laurel Paulson met Thursday to discuss the issues in front of a sparse crowd at the Political Faire.

Along with answering pre-determined panel questions, Hosticka and Paulson both seemed to press "favorite" topics while O'Reilly mainly gave his background and vowed to "talk tough when I get in the house."

Hosticka stressed the importance of Ballot Measure 3, the proposal to limit property taxes to 1 1/2 percent of 1979 value. He said the most important decisions are going to be made Nov. 2, not necessarily in the legislative session. "I'm referring primarily to Ballot Measure 3," he said.

Paulson's big issue was the inequity of the tax structure and the need for a new party to change it.

She said it was unfair that some major corporations pay no federal tax and little state tax, and stressed the need for a graduated income tax paid in a "fair way."

O'Reilly stressed his knowledge of labor, claiming to "know industry from input to output."

All three candidates favored taxing as compensation for another budget shortfall.

Paulson proposed taxing large corporations, Hosticka suggested eliminating the 30 percent property tax relief program and O'Reilly favored a "special tax of one kind or another."

Hosticka and Paulson both spoke out against Ballot Measure 3.

Hosticka pointed out if Measure 3 passes, enacting additional revenue bills through the State Legislature will require the near impossible task of a two-thirds majority vote.

O'Reilly said "I don't think it's good business to propose what Measure 3 proposes," but he admitted property taxpayers are fed up and he won't try to prevent passage of the bill.

On the issue of student involvement in the legislative process, all candidates agreed that voter turnout needs to be improved.
