

IFC resolves itself to reconsider funding groups

By Rich Burr
Of the Emerald

The Incidental Fee Committee voted Wednesday to approve a resolution allowing the committee to reduce funding or zero-fund programs that "have become so specialized or so restrictive that they no longer serve the needs of, or benefit, the student body." The vote was 4-1 with one abstention.

Though the resolution duplicates decision-making authority the IFC already has, it is designed to send ASUO-funded programs a message, said Jeff Nudelman, IFC member who wrote the resolution.

"I want to show the programs that this is our frame of mind," Nudelman said.

The resolution refers to programs such as honorary groups and Tabard Inn/Pot & Quill, Nudelman said.

"I want to stress that eliminating funds is not eliminating programs," he added.

The committee was divided on a resolution requiring all organizations receiving incidental fee funding to submit goals. The Athletic Department, EMU and ASUO Executive are not required to submit goals because their goals are already well-known and accepted, said Bart Hill, IFC chair.

Dianne Ritterband-Mason, initiator of the resolution, said the committee should receive specified goals from the excluded programs to determine if the goals should be funded.

"Maybe I don't want to fund some of their goals," she said.

The resolution failed 3-2-1 with Ritterband-Mason and Mary Alice Holmes approving, Hill, Betty Fry and Mary Shrauger dissenting and Nudelman abstaining.

Another resolution requiring all new groups to be recognized by the ASUO for one year before receiving funding also was defeated.

The resolution would help reduce the number of new programs applying for funds in a year with little available money and increasing numbers of programs, said Holmes, the resolution's sponsor.

Hill said the ASUO does not keep accurate records of program recognition, and the resolution would hinder the committee from granting money to beneficial new groups.

The resolution failed 4-1 with one abstention.

In other business, the committee unanimously approved transferring half of Oregon Student Public Interest Research Group's budget to the state OSPIRG office. A similar transferral was approved by last year's committee, said Tanya Holonko, OSPIRG staff organizer.

The committee also approved transferring money in the OSPIRG budget to fund a consumer hotline the group is scheduled to start.
