

U.S. covert operation reported in Nicaragua

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States is sponsoring a Honduras-based covert military operation to harass and undercut Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, Newsweek magazine reports in this week's editions.

"This is the big fiasco of this administration," Newsweek quoted an unidentified U.S. government official as saying. "This is our Bay of Pigs."

The Reagan administration has denied Nicaraguan claims that it is trying to destabilize that nation's government.

On Sunday, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said that since she had not seen the Newsweek article, she could not comment directly on it. And she said it was the department's "general policy not to comment on alleged intelligence" reports.

According to Newsweek, the covert operation began under Pres. Jimmy Carter and broadened in December when Pres. Ronald Reagan authorized the CIA to contact dissident Nicaraguans in exile and also to conduct political and paramilitary operations to stop weapon shipments to Salvadoran rebels.

Pope gets Spanish welcome, Basque militants set off bomb

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A tightly guarded Pope John Paul II, the first pontiff ever to visit Spain, received a tumultuous welcome from tens of thousands of cheering faithful Sunday at the start of a 10-day tour.

Spaniards thronged the streets of the sunny capital, shouting "Viva el Papa!" showering him with flowers and waving Vatican and Spanish flags as the pontiff waved from his bullet-proof "popemobile."

More than 100,000 policemen and volunteers were mobilized to guard the pope, who was the target of two assassination attempts in the last 17 months, including one by a renegade Spanish priest.

Stepping off his Italian airliner earlier at Barajas airport outside Madrid, the pope kissed the ground and was greeted by King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia.

Telling of his joy at the visit to this overwhelmingly Catholic nation, John Paul also recalled "the well-known tensions, sometimes leading to open clashes which have taken place in the bosom of your society."

One policeman was killed and five others were wounded Sunday night in a bomb blast near the Basque city of Vitoria, 50 miles from the monastery of St. Ignatius of Loyola where the pope is scheduled to say Mass next Saturday, the Spanish news agency EFE reported.

No one claimed responsibility for the explosion, but militant Basque separatists have been waging a bloody campaign in recent years in an effort to gain autonomy for the Basque region in northern Spain.

EFE quoted police as saying the bomb had been placed in a vehicle parked beside a highway and was detonated when several police cars drove by.

Last Thursday, Spanish Socialists won a sweeping victory in nationwide elections and next month will form a government for the first time since Gen. Francisco Franco drove Socialists from power in the 1936-39 civil war. Franco's triumph in that war began 40 years of authoritarian rule.
