Heavy voter turnout predicted, as campaign furor dies down

SALEM (AP) — Oregon voters will pick five congressmen, a governor, the full state House of Representatives and half the state Senate today.

They'll also elect a state school superintendent, labor commissioner and numerous county officials. They will vote on tax limitation for the third time, as well as pass judgement on state land-use planning, self-service gasoline and the nuclear weapons freeze.

Secretary of State Norma Paulus predicts a heavy voter turnout, ranging from a low of 69 percent to as much as 71 percent, if the weather's good.

Polls conducted for The Oregonian newspaper showed that Republican Gov. Vic Atiyeh was slightly ahead of his Democratic challenger, state Sen. Ted Kulongoski, D-Junction City. Libertarian Party candidate Paul Cleveland was a distant third.

Atiyeh said he should be re-elected because he has cut state bureaucracy and helped economic recovery by working behind the scenes to bring jobs to Oregon. Kulongoski has asked voters if they're better off now than they were four years ago. He said they should give him the chance to get Oregon's economy moving again, largely with a program of tax incentives and subsidies for business.

In the congressional races, a poll conducted by Survey Research Institute for The Oregonian found that Republican Bill Moshofsky had narrowed the lead of 1st District Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., to seven percentage points.

In the 2nd District, state Sen. Bob Smith, R-Burns, has an 11-point lead over Democrat Larryann Willis, the SRI poll said.

Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore., who is running in the state's new 5th District, led state Sen. Ruth McFarland, D-Boring, by a margin of 48 percent to 43 percent, the poll said.

In the 4th District, Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., is facing a challenge from Republican economist-turned-politician Ross Anthony. Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., is virtually assured of re-election because his Republican opponent, Tom Phelan, hasn't campaigned.

Workers in both parties believe the Democrats will control the House, but the GOP and the Democrats differ on the size of the margin. Republicans expect to gain some seats in the Senate, though not enough to gain control.

State School Superintendent Verne Duncan is seeking his third four-year term in the nonpartisan post. His opponent is Salem School Superintendent Bill Kendrick, who has outspent Duncan nearly three-to-one in the general election.

The fate of Ballot Measure 3, the 1.5 percent limit on property taxes, was uncertain. The measure limits property taxes to 1.5 percent of market value and rolls back assessed values to 1979 levels.

Opponents say the measure would force school districts and local governments to fire teachers and police officers. They also say the loss of revenue would stop new construction and block recovery. Proponents say the amendment is the only way to limit government spending.

Ballot Measure 6 would eliminate state land-use planning in favor of city and county planning and zoning. That measure's most famous opponent, former Gov. Tom McCall, has been a consistent supporter of land-use planning.

Ballot Measure 4 would allow Oregonians to pump their own gas, and Ballot Measure 5 puts Oregon in favor of a verifiable, bilateral freeze on the construction, testing and deployment of new nuclear weapons.

Sierra Club protests Reagan energy nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that the country does not need another James Watt, the Sierra Club on Monday said Pres. Ronald Reagan would be making a mistake to nominate Donald Hodel for the post of energy secretary.

In a letter to Reagan, Sierra Club president Denny Shaffer said Hodel would be a poor choice because of his record from 1972 to 1977 as head of the Bonneville Power Administration. Since 1981, Hodel has been Interior Secretary James Watt's No. 1 deputy at the interior department.

As administrator, the Sierra Club said, Hodel demonstrated a "lack of foresight and judgment, hostility to energy conservation and the interests of the rate-paying consumers, insensitivity to environmental concerns and resistance to citizens participation in government decisions."

Administration sources say Hodel is the front-runner to become energy secretary when James Edwards leaves the Cabinet later this month to become president of the Medical University of South Carolina. However, last week, Reagan denied a published report that Hodel had been offered the job. The president said no decision had been made yet.
