President's power clarified

Transfers eligible for veto

ASUO Pres. C.J. Balfe has the power to veto Incidental Fee Committee transfers from unallocated money reserves, according to an advisory opinion by the ASUO Constitutional Committee.

Alan Contreras, an ASUO comptroller, asked the committee to interpret a portion of the constitution regarding presidential veto powers.

The passage in question provides that the president has the right to veto "subsequent allocations from unallocated reserves, where such accounts are not broken down by program in the ASUO budget.

"I think the wording is a total mess," Contreras said.

Ken Packman, a former ASUO comptroller, said the clause means the president cannot veto allocations from unallocated reserves to existing funded programs.

Contreras argued that the clause allows the president such veto power but denies the executive veto power concerning the release of money from "reserve" accounts.

The committee, in a unanimous decision, said the president can veto transfers from unallocated reserves and that the other interpretation "runs counter to the clear wording and intent of the rest of S4.5."

"To hold that the President does not have the power to veto allocations from unallocated reserves would remove him from the budgeting process with regard to those monies," the opinion read.

In another development, committee chairer Karsten Rasmussen said Lori Heironimus, committee member, is not in school and that Balfe would be asked to appoint a new member.

Panel reviews anti-nuclear plan

A convocation exploring the consequences of nuclear war will feature a videotaped presentation of retired Admiral Noel Gaylor at 3:30 p.m. in Room 123 Science I.

Gaylor's presentation outlines a 10-step program which he says will reduce the risk of war between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The speech was taped at the Oct. 9 Eugene symposium on the consequences of nuclear war sponsored by Physicians for Social Responsibility. A University faculty panel will examine Gaylor's proposal and answer questions after the presentation.

The panelists are Steve Johnson, sociology; Myron Rothbart, psychology; Dave Soper, physics; and Allan Winkler, history.

The convocation is part of a series entitled Solutions to the Nuclear Arms Race held nationwide at the urging of the Union of Concerned Scientists. Similar programs will be held at more than 500 universities throughout the country.

The convocation is free and open to the public.

Nancie Fadeley receives award

University News Bureau

Former state representative Nancie Fadeley will be given a special award by the American Civil Liberties Union of Oregon for her contributions to civil liberties.

The Civil Liberties Award recognizes Fadeley's work on civil liberties issues during her 10 years in the Oregon Legislature and her recent work while director of public affairs at KWAX-FM, the University's public radio station.

The award will be presented during a 10 a.m. brunch on Sunday at the Faculty Club. Father Robert Drinan, former Massachusetts congressman and an outspoken supporter of individual rights, will be the brunch speaker.

Fadeley's 10-week series on the Bill of Rights this summer helped highlight civil liberties issues, said Dave Fidanque, associate director for the ACLU in Eugene. The documentaries were followed by discussions of the ACLU's work in Oregon.

The awards brunch is open to the public. Tickets cost $20 per person or $35 for two. For reservations and further information, call Fidanque at 345-6162.

Scholarships add up to $207,000

University News Bureau

More than 300 students have received a share of $207,000 in University general scholarships for the 1982-83 school year.

The scholarships have been distributed to qualified students based on academic rating and financial need, according to Carol Richard, student financial aid assistant director.

More than four-fifths of the scholarships, $173,386, were awarded on the basis of academic merit and financial need.

Individual awards ranged from $600 to $1,200. The remaining awards, totaling $34,331, were determined solely on academic achievement.

Merit scholarships ranged from $250 to $500 each.

General scholarships are established through donations rather than with state or federal tax dollars, Richard says. Many are supported through interest income on the investment of gifts and contributions from private donors.
