

Contreras to resign next term

Alan Contreras, ASUO comptroller and senior ASUO official, announced this week he will resign his position effective Jan. 31.

In a letter of resignation submitted Monday to the ASUO, Contreras said he announced his decision early so his successor can learn from him. Contreras said he plans to spend more time on his law studies.

"I must now look forward to the reality of my grades, my career and my need for a new challenge or two," the letter read.

Contreras said he will help ASUO Pres. C.J. Balfe with small projects after he leaves. Contreras does not plan to seek or accept any major ASUO positions in his remaining University years, his letter said.

Contreras was an Incidental Fee Committee member before becoming ASUO budget director last year. He was promoted to ASUO vice president of administration and finance when Jim Edmundson resigned.

Bookstore approves purchases

Bookstore improvements totaling about $12,000 were approved by the University bookstore board of directors Tuesday.

The board approved the purchase of nine cash registers with built-in discounting features which will cost about $7,000. The cash registers were ordered for the winter term book rush, said Jim Williams, bookstore manager.

The cash registers will automatically subtract 11 percent from the purchase price of the book, Williams said, which means it won't be necessary for the bookstore to stamp the discounted price of new books on the inside covers.

The board also approved a plan to redecorate the T-shirt department for $5,000. Such a plan has increased sales at Washington State University and the University of Arizona, Williams said.

The board also approved a motion saying no excess working capital exists. The bookstore's articles of incorporation requires any excess working capital be turned over to the University.

The board approved Maria Neese, a marketing junior, to serve the remaining term of Mark Burgess, who submitted his resignation on Oct. 25.
