

Lallas named acting vice president

University Pres. Paul Olum has named John Lallas, currently executive dean, as acting vice-president of administration while a search committee looks for a replacement for Ray Hawk, who will vacate the position in January.

Lallas will assume Hawk's position Jan. 1 when Hawk retires after 32 years with the University.

Lallas says he will serve as both executive dean and vice president until Hawk's replacement is named, probably in June. He says he will not be considered for the permanent position.

Hawk has served as vice president for the past 11 years. He served as acting president during the summer of 1969, as director of institutional planning and research and as dean of men when he first came to the University in 1950.

"The University owes (Hawk) more than could easily be measured," Olum says. "During Ray Hawk's 32 years of service, he has epitomized the dedication which has enabled the University to reach its present level of excellence.

"John Lallas has been deeply involved in institutional planning and administration at the University for 20 years," Olum says. "He shares with Ray Hawk a knowledge of the University which few others can match. I believe he will do a superb job as acting vice president."

"I'm delighted to serve the University in this way — even though we'll miss Ray," Lallas says. "We'll have to delegate out some things and some things may have to be put on hold for a bit."

The deadline for applications in the national search for Hawk's successor is Dec. 31. A committee of 10 will interview and screen applicants and choose a successor with "extensive experience in fiscal and administrative management."

Joanne Carlson, associate provost for academic affairs, heads the search committee. Deans, administrators and ASUO President C.J. Balfe also will serve on the committee.

Museum to close Friday for exhibit preparation

University News Bureau

The University Museum of Art will be closed Friday due to preparation for a major exhibition by Northwest artists and completion of a newly installed elevator.

The museum will also be closed for meetings and an elevator dedication ceremony and dinner is scheduled later that evening by the Museum Art Council and University Foundation trustees.

The two organizations, with the help of Friends of the Museum of Art, raised approximately $170,000 in private donations, making possible the installation of an all-purpose elevator in the museum. The new elevator will transport patrons, the handicapped, staff and freight to various exhibitions, preparation and storage areas.

The art museum will reopen Saturday.

Sunday, Friends of the Museum of Art have scheduled the kickoff of their annual membership drive. The museum will be open only to current members, invited guests and to those wishing to join the organization.

The museum will return to its normal schedule Nov. 24 and will feature the works of Eugene Bennett, a well-known Northwest artist.

Patchwork exhibition

Twenty three quilting enthusiasts from Japan saw a display of the work of their equally enthusiastic American counterparts at the University's Gerlinger Lounge, Sunday. The event was a luncheon and an afternoon of international exchange hosted by the Pioneer Quilters, a group from Eugene and surrounding areas.

The visitors, members of the Patchwork Quilt Center in Tokyo, have come to the United States with center director Kazui Nihonmatsu and is Nihonmatsu's third visit to the city.
