Bush arrives in Moscow for Brezhnev's funeral

MOSCOW (AP) — Vice President George Bush, arriving in Moscow for President Leonid Brezhnev's funeral, said Sunday night it is America's "fervent hope" the two superpowers can agree to reduce arms spending.

Bush joined Secretary of State George Shultz who arrived earlier Sunday and told reporters the United States is ready for "constructive" East-West ties.

Brezhnev, who died Wednesday of an apparent heart attack at age 75, will be given a hero's burial Monday in Red Square.

Accompanied by Shultz and U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman, Bush went to the Hall of Unions, where Brezhnev's body was lying in state. They stood silently for a minute before the open, flower-adorned casket and Bush then paid his personal condolences to Brezhnev's 74-year-old widow, Viktoria.

The vice president, who arrived from Nigeria, left the hall with his party but unexpectedly returned to talk with Brezhnev's widow for about two minutes through an interpreter.

The Americans brought a fir bough wreath, adorned with a red ribbon, which two Soviet army officers held in front of the casket for a few moments before placing it with the thousands of wreaths filling the three-story building.

Bush, Shultz and Hartman met briefly with several members of the committee directing the funeral, Western diplomats said, but it was not clear if the group included any members of the ruling Politburo.

In a statement given to reporters, Bush said, "It is our fervent hope that today's massive expenditures for arms can be reduced and that the world standard of living, especially for the impoverished, can be greatly improved."

Bush is the first U.S. vice president to visit the Soviet Union since Dwight Eisenhower's vice president, Richard Nixon, was here in 1959 and engaged Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev in the famous "kitchen debate."

Meanwhile, Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hau praised Brezhnev as an "outstanding statesman" and urged the Kremlin leaders to make new efforts to improve Sino-Soviet relations.

Shuttle astronauts space walk for the first time in nine years

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle astronauts readied their gear for today's space walk, the first in nine years, as two Soviet pilots coasted Sunday to an endurance record for man-in-space. The Soviets had logged 186 days — more than six months — aboard Salyut 7.

The space walk by Columbia's two mission specialists, depended on William Lenoir's stomach. His queasiness had forced NASA to order a one-day delay; Sunday he was working without complaint.

"We're looking forward to going out there tomorrow — looks like it needs some dusting and cleaning," said astronaut Joseph Allen as he peered into the space shuttle's open cargo bay.

"We can't wait to get started," said Mission Control. Before venturing out of the cabin, Lenoir and Allen will sit in their space suits for three hours, breathing pure oxygen.

"You guys did a great job today," capcom Bryan O'Connor told the crew as they bedded down for the night.
