

Beavers put last spike into Ducks' season

By Doug Levy

The emotional edge was there for the Oregon women's volleyball team to beat Oregon State in its last game of the season Saturday night.

Before the game, Annetta Ensworth, the only senior on the Duck squad, was given a warm farewell salute by her teammates and fans. Ensworth, Oregon's team captain, had suffered a sprained ankle last week and had to miss the game.

Unfortunately, Oregon State had the physical edge on the Ducks, winning the match in three straight games, 15-10, 15-9, 16-14. The loss left Oregon 4-8 in NorPac league play, 12-17 on the season. On Friday, the Ducks swept Idaho 16-14, 15-9, 15-2.

The Oregon State match, although only a three-game affair, was fairly close. In the first game, the teams were tied twice, at 5-5 and 7-7, before OSU scored eight of the next 11 points to subdue Oregon.

However, the Ducks bounced back in the second game to take leads of 5-2 and 9-6. Again, the Beavers rallied, winning the game's final nine points. Then, in the third game Oregon broke open a 9-9 deadlock and, paced by kills by Ronda Dalthorp and Sue Harbour, burst to a 14-10 lead.

But, as has been their tendency all year, the Ducks could not get the big point. OSU ran off six straight points to end the game, match, and season for the Ducks.

"There is nobody you want to beat worse than Oregon State," said a disappointed coach Chris Voelz, "but this team is too on and off to hold any intensity. They lack discipline."

Voelz was right. Too often, the Ducks suffered collapses that allowed the Beavers to run off strings of points. One factor in the Ducks demise was that reserve setter Sandi Adams, who had played well the night before against Idaho, had an off game.

The game was a reversal of Friday's win. The key to that victory was chances — Oregon had a lot of them. Harbour and Dalthorp each attempted 25 kills, and Harbour was successful on 13 with only one error. Dalthorp had six and Stephanie Tambe five.
