Recital turns jazz gig

By Joe Rooper
Of the Emerald

When Richard Smith sits down to play his senior University recital tonight at Jo Federigo's, he'll bring some talented friends with him.

Smith, a senior music student and guitarist with the Dan Siegel band, will be assisted by Siegel and University graduate Don Latarski. The recital begins at 10 p.m. and features contemporary works by Pat Metheny, Miles Davis and Tom Scott, among others.

One of Smith's goals is to attain a master's degree in music. He knows the value of a structured education. But as a working musician, he is a firm believer in the importance of practical experience and "getting some dirt under your fingernails."

"One of the reasons I want to have my recital in a bar is because the bar scene is a school in itself," says Smith.

Smith, who has shared billings with such groups as The Crusaders, Spyro Gyra, Jean Luc Ponty and Tim Weisberg, is a South Eugene High School graduate.

"There were ten of us at South Eugene where all we did was live, think and sleep jazz. That was an important cookbook for me," says Smith.

One of the biggest turning points for Smith was performing in front of a large audience and "not choking." When Smith was 18, he played with the Les Brown Orchestra in the 1978 Bob Hope Show.

"The only problem was that he (Bob Hope) was so funny, I kept cracking up and missing my cues. Really, I was so scared I couldn't even hold my pick," says Smith.

That was five years ago, and since then Smith has made three nationwide tours with Siegel. Still, Smith wouldn't label himself as successful.

"Successful is an objective term. You can work six nights a week for three months and suddenly the gigs disappear. It makes you humble and objective," says Smith.

Smith says his attitude has changed over the years. With the help of Siegel and his working environment, he has become more tuned to what the audience wants and more critical, he says.

"I think I've changed from taking what people can do for me, as opposed to what I can do for people. Music is so much more than the notes. It's not enough to hit all the notes, you have to hit them with conviction," says Smith.

With the rising prices of concert tickets and albums, people expect more from the entertainers, and Smith thinks the fans must be rewarded.

"When a person pays $10 for a concert ticket, he expects more than a performance — he expects to be entertained," says Smith.

But entertainers are human, and Siegel's last tour played 20 shows in 23 days. What happens when a musician gets tired?

"There's a taboo about that sort of thing," says Smith. "The time to burn out is when you're not playing."

"When there's 5,000 screaming maniacs out there, you have to feel good."
