

University employees must file

Tax-exempt University employees need to file a W-4 form with the Internal Revenue Service by Feb. 15 or face an unpleasant surprise — a smaller February paycheck.

Even those who claimed tax exemption in 1982 must file the form again because the withholding exemption expires on

Jan. 31 of each year, says Joyce Heaton, payroll supervisor.

In the past, employees have been shocked when their paycheck is substantially reduced because they haven't filed an exemption form. To avoid that problem, she has sent a memo about the need to file W-4 forms to all deans, department heads and payroll personnel.

Employees who have no tax liability for 1982 and expect to have none for 1983 are permitted by law to claim exemption from withholding for federal and state income taxes.

The W-4 forms are available in the payroll office on the first floor of Oregon Hall.

Police still search for rapists

Eugene police are still looking for two men suspected of sodomizing a 18-year-old University student early Sunday morning near Chapman Hall.

The woman apparently left a tavern on Kincaid Street about 1:30 a.m. to return to her residence hall.

As she crossed campus she was approached by a man who began talking with the woman, while another man with a knife grabbed her from behind. The man with the knife threatened her if she did not do as they told her.

Police said the first suspect then forced her to commit sodomy while the second suspect held her down. But both men ran away when they heard someone approaching.

According to the police report of the incident the first suspect was six feet tall and 180 pounds, while the second was six feet two inches tall and 200 pounds. Both were white and about 23 years old, said police.

Couple charged in car bombing

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — A woman and a male acquaintance are charged with murder in the car bombing death last month of the woman's husband, Springfield police said Tuesday.

Barbara Ann Harris, 31, and Terry James White, 32, were arrested separately Monday night, they said.

Police would describe White only as "an acquaintance" of the Harris family.

A bomb tore the roof off a small car driven by Robert Eugene Harris as he prepared to leave a Rosboro Lumber Co. parking lot Dec. 2 after working a graveyard shift.

Lt. Leroy Bergstrom said the arrests were the result of "long, hard, tedious work" by Springfield detectives but would not say what led detectives to the arrests.

"We eventually developed sufficient cause to effect an arrest," Bergstrom said. "We just never gave up on it. There were several directions we were going in, and this is one of them."

Harris, 36, died from "massive hemorrhage and tissue destruction as a result of the blast," authorities said.

Workers said they found Harris lying near the driver's side of the car, his clothes "pretty well shredded." He died at McKenzie-Willamette Memorial Hospital in Springfield about 11 hours after the bombing.

The bomb was apparently triggered electronically in the parking lot of the mill, where Harris had worked for 17 years, police said.

White and Harris were held overnight in the Springfield city jail at the police station, with arraignment Wednesday in Lane County District Court.

Workshop responds to basic publicity queries

Publicity questions will be answered today at a 3 p.m. workshop in EMU Century Room E.

Jan Warren, EMU program adviser, Keith Nelson, Outdoor Program coordinator, Sandy Vaughn, EMU recreational coordinator and Dane Claussen, ASUO press officer, will lead the session entitled "How Do We Get the Word Out."

The session is the fifth in a series of "informal/informative" workshops sponsored this term by the ASUO office of program development and the EMU consulting office.

Symposium looks at wilderness' future

Reagan administration wilderness policies have prompted a symposium to discuss the future of Oregon's wilderness starting today and running through Thursday.

The two-day symposium, sponsored by the Survival Center and Outdoor Program, will feature a series of free lectures, movies and multi-media slide shows in EMU Rm. 167. The symposium starts today at 3:30 p.m. with a movie entitled "Time for Survival" followed by lectures on endangered species and evolution of wilderness use.

The day's activities will conclude with a multi-media slide presentation entitled "Four Seasons, A Walk Through the Redwoods."
