Reagan sends congress budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pres. Ronald Reagan sent Congress advance copies of his $848.5 billion budget for 1984 on Sunday, and Democratic and Republican leaders agreed he faces a major struggle over proposed cuts in social programs, a $30 billion increase for defense and standby tax increases.

"There will be a bipartisan effort to protect" social programs from deeper cuts, declared Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

"I also think there will be a bipartisan effort to cut defense spending" below Reagan's recommended level, declared Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

Sen. Pete Domenici, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, added: "From my standpoint I believe we can find some additional savings" in the defense budget.

In general, Domenici defended the president's budget as "very responsible."

But he conceded, "It may be picked apart in details."

The budget — predicting a deficit of $208 billion this year and $189 billion in 1984 — will be released formally today, but the administration already was deploying senior officials to defend it.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said Congress eventually will come around to the president's view when it discovers the size of the spending cuts and tax increases needed to bring deficits down.

"I think in the long run when they finally take a look at what we have suggested, that the alternatives are such that they will come back to what we have, that we will get most of our budget by the time that Congress goes home."

He said the Reagan administration's decision to cut back $55 billion in defense spending authority was as big a cut as could be made in the military budget. The amount is a reduction in Reagan's original plan for increasing military spending over the next five years.

head of PSU's affirmative action program.

"It was my understanding, after talking to the regional (ROTC) director, that there would be no exclusion (of homosexuals) other than in the commissioning process," Morris says.

Asked about the scholarship criteria, Morris conceded "now you raise another question that perhaps I should look at more finitely."

Wolfgram argues the inconsistency is justified because the scholarships apply only to the commissioning process, which is governed by military, rather than University, rules. And while homosexuals may not be commissioned, they are allowed to take military science courses, he says.

"As a department of the University, any student can take any courses. The commissioning process, however, is part of the Army," he says.

"That's exactly why the program doesn't belong here," counters Ryan. "What business does the University have in having a department that's essentially being run by the U.S. government?"

Aside from "kicking the ROTC off campus," Funk sees no compatible answer.

"Either the entire military complex changes for the University or the University officials turn their heads. Certainly the easiest solution is for the officials to turn their heads."
