Ducks throw away win over ASU

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Pac-10 Conference's leading free throw shooting team didn't show it here Saturday night.

The Oregon Ducks, who were shooting free throws at a 78-percent clip in their Pac-10 games, shot just eight of 22 (36.3-percent) against Arizona State Saturday night en route to a 54-52 loss.

"We have done well at the free throw line all year and last night if we made our free throws like we have done we would have won the game," said Duck basketball coach Jim Haney from Tempe Sunday. "I think we were too concerned about turning the ball over too much when we had players at the free throw line. We shouldn't have been worrying about the other things — we should have just concentrated on the free throws."

The Ducks' inability to cash in on their free throws down the stretch proved to do them in — but it shouldn't have been.

Oregon had a opportunity after opportunity to bury the Sun Devils in the second half. The best came with 2:24 remaining in the game and the Ducks holding a 51-45 advantage. But the Ducks' nemesis — the free throw — prevented Oregon from running away with the game.

In the next minute and a half Duck guard Gary Gatewood missed a free throw and Donald Dutton misfired on two out of three. The missed free throws allowed Arizona State, led by star guard Byron Scott, to climb back in the game.

Scott eventually tied the game at 52-52 with 1:13 left when he canned a jump shot. The Ducks then called timeout but then were unable to cross midcourt before a questionable 10-second violation was called.

"I did have a chat with Booker (Turner, the referee) after the call," said Haney. "Only nine seconds ran off the clock between the time we called the timeout and the time the violation was called. It was just one of those things."

Arizona State took the possession and ran down the clock until the final six seconds when Scott drove the lane and nailed a shot over a falling Gary Gatewood, who was trying to draw the offensive charge.

Next up for the Ducks is a game tonight with the University of Arizona in Tucson.

Student Government . . . In office to represent and serve you . . . the Associated Students of the University of Oregon
The ASUO student government is composed of four independent but interrelated bodies. Three are:

1. Incidental Fee Committee (IFC)

The IFC is a seven member committee elected from the general student body each spring. Members do not represent any particular student group, class level, or academic department. Rather, IFC is responsible for fiscal policies and program goals as well as budget allocation.

2. Student-University Affairs Board (SUAB)

SUAB composes one third of the University of Oregon's Senate. SUAB is an eighteen member elected body whose members are elected for two year terms on a rotational basis. SUAB members represent specific academic departments and colleges. SUAB is responsible for academic policy input, student-faculty committees, and minor academic grievances.

3. ASUO Executive (president).....C.J. Balfe

The ASUO Executive is the administrative focal point for student initiated activities. The responsibilities of the Executive are divided into three major areas, each with its own Vice Presidential office:

Administration and Finance.....David Gibson

The Vice President of Administration and Finance is directly responsible for the distribution of the IFC budget as allocated by the committee. The Office of Administration and Finance also works with the ASUO Comptrollers to monitor program activities and budgets. The Office acts as fiscal liaison between the ASUO Executive and the EMU and the University Athletic Department.

University and State Affairs.....Debi Lance

The Vice President of University and State of Affairs has two major areas of responsibility; University and academic affairs, and State and public affairs. The Office is responsible for the ASUO legislative effort and coordination of lobbying with the Oregon Student Lobby, as well as for coordinating and publicizing general ASUO policy statements and for maintaining good relations with alumni and the general public.

Note: February 21-25 is Higher Education Awareness Week.

Program Development.....Vincson Green

The Vice President of Program Development is responsible for providing ASUO Executive services for students and programs. These services include coordination and administration of major campus events, coordination of fund raising activities of the programs, providing general information on the ASUO and its programs to the student body, and providing general management training and assistance to the ASUO programs.
