Reagan wants more money for arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration asked Congress on Monday for $18.2 billion to upgrade strategic weapons in fiscal 1984 but said it is "under no illusions" that anybody could win in a nuclear conflict.

The sole objective of the American atomic arsenal is "for discouraging — for deterring — aggression and attack against ourselves and our allies," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said in his annual report to Capitol Hill.

"We believe that neither side could win" in a nuclear war, he said.

About one-third of the $18.2 billion for the strategic buildup would go for the MX missile. Other projects include the B-1 and radar-evading "stealth" bomber, the Trident II missile for Trident submarines, and improved communications among the components of the nation's nuclear arsenal.

Weinberger criticized proposals for a nuclear weapons freeze.

A freeze "would reduce the stability of our deterrent" by blocking plans to replace aging weapons and improve their defense against attack, his report said.

Ever since Pres. Ronald Reagan took office, his administration has been dogged by the question of whether it is more willing than past administrations to use nuclear weapons.

Some advocates of a nuclear freeze say Reagan's advisers have proposed a plan to win a nuclear war with the Soviet Union, and public opinion polls have said that many Americans are worried about Reagan's potential willingness to use atomic weapons.

Administration officials have strongly denied that premise. Weinberger has argued that "there is nothing new about our policy," an argument restated in his report to Congress.

As part of its modernization program, the administration wants to build 100 MX missiles to replace the aging Minuteman and Titan land-based weapons it says are vulnerable to a Soviet first strike.

But two previous plans for basing the missile have been shot down by Congress, which late last year killed the administration's request for money to build the first five MX weapons.

Reagan appointed a commission to try to come up with another basing plan. The commission's report is due in three weeks.

The budget Reagan sent to Congress Monday has $6.7 billion for the MX, which Reagan has named the "Peacekeeper."

Gunshots set tempo of truckers strike

From Associated Press Reports

An independent truckers strike punctuated by the bullets of snipers brought business to a crawl at many truck stops nationwide Monday but apparently had little immediate impact on shipments of food and factory goods.

Shots were fired at 10 tractor-trailer rigs in scattered violence in eight states as members of the Independent Truckers Association began parking their rigs at midnight to protest the 5 cent-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax and proposed hikes in highway user fees. There were no reports of injuries.

An official of a truckers' association said up to 70 percent of the independent drivers were participating in the strike, but the government estimated only 20 percent were taking part.

A truck driver unloading his rig in Brigham City, Utah, was shot in the chest by a sniper Monday afternoon, said Police Chief J.N. Herbert, who added that he was uncertain whether the shooting was related to the strike. Authorities said

Howard Adams, 45, of Riverside, Calif., a driver for Cotter and Co., was taken to surgery at Brigham City Hospital on Monday night.

His condition was not immediately available.

One driver in Mississippi got into a running gun battle with three assailants in a car, and three shots were fired into the repair shop of a trucking firm in Chambersburg, Pa.

Two brothers from Morgantown, W.Va., Darrell and Dale Dunn, were arrested after several truck drivers reported rocks were thrown at their vehicles along U.S. 119 north of Morgantown. The Duns, who identified themselves as independent truckers, were charged with misdemeanor destruction of property and released on $250 bond each, said state police Sgt. P.L. Ferguson.

"Just how long has Barry been waiting for his ride?"
