

Cowboys grab Walter, Houston takes Brown

The Baltimore Colts No. 1 draft pick John Elway made the biggest noise on draft day in the National Football League Tuesday but a pair of Oregon Ducks were heard from, too.

Mike Walter, the Ducks' All-Pac-10 defensive end, and Steve Brown, a pre-season All-American pick last season at defensive back were also picked in the early rounds of annual NFL derby.

Walter was chosen in the second round by the Dallas Cowboys while Brown was tabbed by the Houston Oilers in the third round.

Both were a little amazed to be taken so early in the draft and also a bit surprised by the franchises they went to.

"I knew Dallas was a little interested in me but I didn't think that I would go in the second round," admitted Walter. "If I was going to go in the second round I thought it might be to San Francisco. All along I was never sure how interested the Cowboys were."

"I never did any testing or even talked to Houston," said Brown. "I am really surprised that Houston picked me and also that I went in the third round."

"I'm really excited because I have never been to Houston. I just hope they need me and I am not going down there just to be going there."

Walter, who starred at defensive end for Oregon during his four years as a Duck, is slated to become a linebacker at Dallas. With his size, 6-4, 240 pounds, the Cowboys see him too small for a defensive end role but just right for a linebacker position.

"I think I am really best suited for the position (linebacker)," Walter said. "I think I have the tools and the athletic ability to play linebacker. I knew before the draft they needed help at linebacker."

Brown, too, feels he has a good chance at fitting in the Houston system. The Oilers have been beset by many problems in the their defensive secondary and the time may be right for Brown to step in and earn a spot on the roster.

"I know that they need help in the secondary," said Brown. "I hope that I will be able to help."

Brown is also still entertaining thoughts of the United States Football League. The Arizona Wranglers have expressed interest in Brown, and now with his early selection in the draft, his stock certainly will rise.

"I am still considering the USFL and I am going to talk with Arizona," Brown said.

But it was Elway who was the talk of the draft before and after.

Before the draft, Elway indicated that if the Baltimore Colts drafted him, he would not play football but instead turn to baseball. Sure enough, the Colts picked Elway as the No. 1 selection and the former Stanford star called the Colts Tuesday morning and told them he was going to play baseball.

The rest of the draft went as expected. Los Angeles, picking in the number two position, nabbed Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist as its pick. Seattle, which went third, picked up Curt Warner of Penn State.

Every team in the American Conference Eastern Division selected a quarterback. Buffalo picked Miami's Jim Kelly, Illinois' Tony Eason went to New England, Miami selected Pittsburgh's Dan Marino and the New York Jets went with Cal-Davis' Ken O'Brien.

Golfers net easy win

The Oregon golf team posted its second tournament victory in two weeks with an easy 44-stroke win in the Portland State Rippling River Tournament which ended play Monday.

The Ducks entered the final 18 holes with a 33-stroke advantage and Paul Weinhold's final day 69 enabled him to take medalist honors.

Oregon's Mark Sivara fired an incredible 64 on Monday which moved him from sixth after the first day to second after the 54 holes.
