Vacation college offers leisure

Registration is now open for the 19th annual Grace Graham Vacation College to be held during the 1983 summer session at the University.

The vacation college offers a week of study and recreation for adults on August 19 through 26. High school students accompanied by their parents may also attend.

This year the participants will choose one of two concurrent academic sessions. The first will explore human achievement and capacities in individual, social and political contexts in "Human Possibilities: a sampling of perspectives."

The second group will explore "The Codes That Govern and Enhance Life" through a variety of subjects ranging from genetic DNA codes to computer codes to the patterns of language.

One of the oldest vacation colleges in the nation, the University program was developed and organized in 1964 by Grace Graham, a University education professor emerita, for whom it was named in 1978. Based on the concept of the folk high school in Denmark, the college encourages the free exchange of ideas and close association with faculty leaders and fellow participants.

There are no entrance requirements or exams for the college, which focuses on recreation and study for the pleasure of learning. Classes are scheduled in the mornings, leaving afternoons and evenings free for sightseeing, recreation and social activities.

Among the special activities planned are a visit to Eugene's Hult Center for the Performing Arts, day trips to the Oregon Coast and to Ashland for a Shakespearean play, and a river float trip.

The college is based at the University Inn. Most classes will be held there and in the University Law Center.

Cost is $420 per person for a single or $410 per person for a double room. Fees include room and board, tuition and the costs of most recreational events.

Reduced fees for those providing their own lodging are available. The vacation college also has scholarship program.

For complete information, write Grace Graham Vacation College, 111 Susan Campbell Hall, or call 686-5555.

Music school provides course in orchestras

A free orchestra rehearsal course will be available to the general public this summer at the University's school of music beginning tomorrow.

Orchestra Reading Repertoire Rehearsal, which runs from 10:30 a.m. to noon Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, will offer instrumentalists a chance to read through the standard symphonic repertoire, according to Marsha Mabrey, music professor and conductor of the University Symphony.

"Participants from the University and the community will get acquainted with new pieces and review old favorites," Mabrey says.

There is no admission fee, and no academic credit will be given. Interested individuals may sign up for the course during summer session registration today at MacArthur Court.

For additional information, call Mabrey at 686-3791 or 686-3761.

Earth First promise music, ask awareness

Were you too young for Woodstock and too cheap to go to US?

That's okay, there's another chance to frolic to music in the great out-of-doors coming up July 3 northwest of Grants Pass in the English Cabin Meadows.

The only cost will be your attention when members of Earth First, the environmental organization sponsoring the festivities, explain their cause and ask for donations.
