

Four departments to offer Pacific Rim classes

Thanks to a grant from the U.S. Department of Education, the University will expand course offerings concerning the Pacific Rim, a huge area which includes countries bordering the Pacific Ocean.

Courses relating to issues of diversification, specialization and trade in the Pacific Basin will be coordinated by four departments and schools within the University, says Clarence Thurber, a political science professor who also directs the International Studies Program.

"In general, these courses will deal with the strategic problems that new relationships of international trade and culture will pose for the economy of Oregon and the Pacific Northwest over the coming decade," Thurber says.

"Another indicator of student interest in the Pacific Rim is the increasing number of business students taking Japanese and Chinese."

The economics department, journalism school, college of business administration and international studies program will implement courses ranging from an international management business class to a journalism class on reporting Pacific Basin affairs.

The grant has been negotiated and an award should begin July 1, Thurber says. The first grant will be $40,000 and will be renewed yearly for the same amount if Congress appropriates the funds.

The grant is the international studies program's second from the U.S. Department of Education.

Educator gets journalism honor

Willard Thompson, a nationally known advertising educator, has been named Ruhl Distinguished Professor of Journalism at the University for winter term 1984.

Professor of journalism and mass communication at the University of Minnesota and former head of that university's advertising program, Thompson will be in residence for three months at the University's school of journalism. He will teach two courses and give several special lectures.

Thompson, who is president of the American Academy of Advertising, taught at the University from 1952 to 1960 and also served as the director of university relations and assistant to then President O. Meredith Wilson.

Thompson went to Minnesota when Wilson took the presidency there. He served as dean of extension as well as director of the summer session, a post he still holds. He is considered a national leader in the field of continuing education.

The Ruhl professorship is made possible by an endowment given to the University by the late Robert Ruhl and Mabel Ruhl of Medford, long-time owners of the Medford Mail-Tribune. The endowment sponsors an annual symposium on media ethics and press performance at the University as well as professional residencies by newspaper executives.

"Willard Thompson is a distinguished leader in the field of advertising education and a gifted teacher," says Everett Dennis, journalism school dean.

Thompson has worked in advertising for the Batten, Barten, Durstine & Osburn agency, and was a newspaper reporter for two dailies in Illinois as well as president and general manager of a broadcast company.

His teaching career began at the University of Illinois where he earned his doctorate. He also taught at the University of Oklahoma as well as at Minnesota and Oregon.

State seeks dorm input

The State Board of Higher Education will discuss and hold a hearing on proposed changes in dormitory and food service charges at their meeting Friday at 10:30 a.m. in the EMU Dad's Room.

The proposed adoption calls for a 5.6 percent rate increase for a single room at the University Inn, but the University will not change other existing dormitory rates, according to a state board document. However, the standard 20-meal plan will be cut to 19 meals per week if the proposal is adopted.

This amendment would affect each state university differently. At OSU a new 15-meal plan would cost students as much as the existing 19-meal plan. Next year's 19-meal plan will be $82 more expensive.

The proposed adoption would increase residence hall and food service rates at several other state universities from 2 percent at Southern Oregon State College to a possible 9 percent at the Oregon Health Sciences University.

Also on the state board's docket Friday will be the proposed lease of Condon School (at 17th and Alder) from the Eugene 4-J School District to the University. The school district decided Condon School would be "surplus" after June 30, 1983.
