

Police question rape suspect

Like a scene from Hill Street Blues, uniformed police officers surrounded Chapman Hall shortly before 10:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Three Eugene police officers guarded Chapman Hall exits while detectives searched the building for a possible suspect in the sexual assault of a 7-year-old girl in a Gerlinger Hall men's shower two weeks ago.

No arrests or charges were made.

Sgt. Rick Gilliam, who waited outside Chapman, said police received a call between 9 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. that a man fitting the suspect's description may have entered the building.

"We're still trying to locate the suspect and would appreciate any assistance," said detective David Poppe, of the Eugene Police Department.

Police report that a man approached two girls, a 7-year-old and an 8-year-old on the morning of June 22, and asked if they would help carry some sports equipment.

The girls, who were members of the University's summer sports programs, agreed and the man led them into Gerlinger Hall. The man left one girl outside the locker room and took the other to the men's shower area and allegedly sexually assaulted her.

Police are looking for a white male in his early 30s who is 5 feet 8 inches to 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs about 165 pounds, has short, light brown or blondish hair and has a beard or possibly a goatee.

Finalists chosen in V.P. search

The search for a new Vice President of University Relations has been narrowed down to four finalists from an original field of 200 applicants, said Everette Dennis, the search committee chair and dean of the journalism school.

Curt Simic left the position last April for a similar job at the University of California at Berkeley.

The candidates are:

James Drinnon, an attorney who will be on campus July 11-12. Drinnon has been chancellor for the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, as well as the executive vice president and general manager of the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville.

Allan Hershfield, director of a national university consortium for teaching at the University of Maryland at College Park. Hershfield was formerly an assistant academic vice president for UC-Berkeley.

Wayne Kurlinski is currently vice president for university relations at Ohio University at Athens. He formerly held the same position at Rutgers University and at the State University of New York.

Kurlinski was on the University campus last week for extensive interviews with search committee members, University deans and administrators.

James Shea, who until recently was vice president for university relations at Temple University in Philadelphia, is returning to his old stomping grounds.

Shea was director of development and university relations at the University from 1962-68. The communications professor is "well-known in the field of university relations," Dennis said.

Although "it's conceivable" there could be additional finalists, Dennis doubts any will emerge.

The first round of the search for the new vice president ended June 1, after attracting some "superb" applicants, Dennis said.

The vice president of university relations is a principle, public spokesperson for the University. The job's responsibilities include advancing the University's relations with local, state and national constituencies; promoting and directing fundraising activities; and overseeing several departments such as the University Foundation, University Publications and the News Bureau.

After meeting all the finalists, the search committee will rank-order them and send their recommendation to University Pres. Paul Olum, who will make the final choice.

Dennis expects the new vice president to be chosen by the end of July.

Nine positions filled by ASUO appointees

ASUO President Mary Hotchkiss announced nine executive appointments last week.

Denise Fuller received a two-year appointment to the Oregon Daily Emerald board of directors, the second of Hotchkiss' two appointments to the board. Previously, Richard Burr was named to a one-year term.

Fuller was the editor of her high school paper in Forest Grove and has edited press releases for Tualatin Vineyards.

Daniel Malarkey and Kasey Brooks were selected as Associated Students President's Advisory Council representatives. ASPAC is the fledgling group created by the administration of former ASUO Pres. C.J. Balfe.

Malarkey, a board member of OSPIRG, fills one of the program representative slots and Brooks is the student-at-large. A second program representative will be named in the fall.

Brooks finished second to Gary Okazaki in student voting for the position. When Okazaki resigned to become ASUO coordinator of University affairs Hotchkiss says Brooks became the most logical person available as a student representative.

Lisa Nuss was appointed to the EMU board of directors. She has worked for the Student University Relation Council, the New Student Host Program, the Student University Affairs Board and has been a student lobbyist.

Hotchkiss named Mark Enos, Kayleen Shiiba and Rick Housh to the Insurance Committee. All three were observers of the committee last year and Hotchkiss says their experience makes them logical choices as committee members.

Michelle Rebar of the Survival Center was named to the Environmental Studies Committee. She was responsible for seeing to it that a student position became possible on the committee, according to Hotchkiss.

Valerie Singer was appointed temporary bookkeeper for the summer.
