For a mere $50 a month a furniture rental store will lavishly furnish your humble cottage.

Renting your furniture may be the better buy

Moving in to a new place can be a traumatic experience — especially if it's unfurnished. Let's face it, not many students can afford to run to Levitz Furniture and buy a complete set of new furniture.

But there are cheaper ways.

One of the easiest is to rent furniture from Grantree.

Shelley Pickrell, a showroom representative at Grantree, says they can completely furnish an apartment for $50 a month. That fee includes a complete living room set with a couch and coffee table, a dinette set and four chairs and a bedroom set that includes a bed and chest of drawers.

And one advantage of renting from Grantree is that renters are not held liable for normal wear-and-tear or accidental damage to the furniture. Cigarette burns and beer stains are taken care of, Pickrell says — which makes Grantree attractive to fraternities.

When a student signs the rental agreement, Grantree agrees to deliver and pick up the furniture. All they ask is a 30 day notice before picking up the furniture.

And another advantage for the student who is looking a few years down the road is Grantree's rent-to-buy option. All the money paid for rent is applicable to the eventual purchase of the furniture.

Grantree also allows furniture exchange, which makes things easy for students who like to change their decor every few weeks.

But if $50 a month seems too steep, break out some form of transportation and hit the road for the garage sales. Check some shoppers and keep your eyes peeled for signs. What's not good enough for someone else might be just what you need to complete your living room or bedroom. Surprisingly good deals can be found at cheap prices.

Last not but least are Goodwill stores and others of that ilk. A trip through a Goodwill store shows lounge chairs for prices ranging from $6 to $15, couches from $12 to $19 and bedframes all at $7. They also have those ancient cabinets like the ones mom and dad used to have for only $14.

The only problem with Goodwill stores and garage sales is that it's tough to talk them into delivering it to your new pad. That means you either have a truck or a friend with a truck. But at the money you save, it's worth it.
