Newscaster dies in crash

NEW YORK — Jessica Savitch died in an automobile accident Monday at the age of 35, still in pursuit of the "big things" in network TV. Killed along with her was New York Post executive Martin Fischbein, 34.

She was a success by almost any standard of the business. A network executive called her "a television natural," and only a year ago, viewers ranked her just behind three anchormen — Dan Rather of CBS, Roger Mudd of NBC and Frank Reynolds of ABC — when asked, "How much confidence do you have in his, or her, reporting?"

"The problem is," Savitch said in an interview with TV Guide published in 1979, "whenever you think of succeeding, you think you will be happy. You think happiness will be 'written on the ticket.' It's not. Success does not have to bring happiness. Success brings success. I think I succeeded because so many people told me I couldn't."

At the height of her career, she substituted for John Chancellor and David Brinkley on the "NBC Nightly News" and anchored the Saturday edition of the program. She was favored by many to become the first woman to anchor a network evening newscast on her own.

As recently as August, Savitch lost her weekend job to Connie Chung, who was hired away from the CBS station in Los Angeles, KNXT. Savitch was assigned the twice-a-night "NBC News Digest" report, with a promise that she would take over the Sunday "Nightly News" after the first of the year.

Hatfield calls for UN force

A United Nations force should replace the multi-national peacekeeping force in Lebanon, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said Monday.

"I will strongly recommend to the president that he seek to persuade the other members of the multi-national force to join us in withdrawing all troops immediately," Hatfield said.

"I have believed from the beginning that a show of force as our main tool of foreign policy would dilute our diplomacy and lessen the potential effectiveness of our military," Hatfield said in the prepared statement.

Hatfield was one of three Republicans in the Senate to vote against the War Powers Act measure allowing the Marines to stay in Lebanon for 18 months.

He said only the United Nations can function in an effective peacekeeping role since it is a more appropriate mechanism to address the problem.

"Lebanon remains a tripwire which threatens to plunge the entire globe into war," he said.

"The deep loss experienced by this nation and the families of those American personnel who were struck down while serving the cause of peace is profound," Hatfield said.

"They risked their life for a better world but their tragic murder at the hands of terrorists behooves us to seek to avoid a senseless repetition," he added.

Soviets plan East bases

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union, in its strongest response yet to the planned deployment of U.S. missiles in Western Europe, said Monday it is readying its own new missile bases in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Western military analysts believe the Soviet armed forces already have short-range battlefield nuclear missiles stationed on the soil of their Warsaw Pact allies. But Monday's announcement was the first public acknowledgement by the Kremlin that it was even planning a nuclear role for Eastern Europe.

"Preparatory work is being started on the territory of (East Germany and Czechoslovakia) for deployment of missile complexes of operational-tactical designation," the official Tass news agency quoted the Soviet Defense Ministry as announcing.

It said the preparations were "one of the planned response measures in case the American missiles are sited in Europe."

The plan was formulated in agreement with East Germany and Czechoslovakia, the ministry said. The announcement came as Czechoslovak leader Gustav Husak met in Prague with East German leader Erich Honecker.

The NATO allies are scheduled to begin installing 572 new U.S. medium-range Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in five Western European nations in December. Western leaders say these missiles will counter more than 200 Soviet SS-20 triple-warhead missiles stationed in Russia and targeted on Western Europe.

Western diplomats in Moscow described Monday's Soviet announcement as a further step in a Kremlin propaganda campaign aimed at convincing the West European public and governments to reject the U.S. missiles.

The Soviets are believed to already have SS-21 and SS-22 nuclear-tipped rockets in Eastern Europe — with ranges of 70 miles and 500 miles, respectively. Western analysts have said they believe the Soviets will add the SS-22 and the 300-mile-range SS-23 to SS-21s already positioned in East Germany.

Bigfoot seen in Oregon

GRANTS PASS — A Nevada motorcyclist appeared shaken but sane when he reported seeing an ape-like creature resembling Bigfoot on the freeway, state police said Monday.

Paul Claywell of Las Vegas, Nev., pulled off Interstate 5 on Sunday morning, told state police he saw a 7-foot hairy creature run on two legs off the four-lane highway, then continued on his way, state police dispatcher Kathy Wooton said.

"The officer's comment was, 'The fellow (who reported the incident) was obviously very shook and seemed quite sane when he came in,'" Wooton added.

"He came in and advised he was northbound on Interstate 5 and between the two Grants Pass exits...operating his motorcycle slow, in the rain," Wooton read from the state police log.

"He stated that his headlight hit an animal which was standing upright on its hind legs. It turned and looked at him as he approached it, then turned and ran off the road, still upright.

Bigfoot is the popular name for a large ape-like creature, also known by the Indian name Sasquatch, which supposedly roams through isolated forests in the Northwest.

"He stated that he knew he was tired, but he knew for sure it wasn't a bear because bears usually don't run upright. Claywell stated the animal stood about 7 to 8 feet tall," Wooton said.

Off the freeway, there is a large statue of a caveman at the north entrance to Grants Pass. But Wooton said it was unlikely Claywell mistook the statue for Bigfoot.

"That wouldn't have run across the road in front of him," she said.
