We at the Emerald are tired of the blandness of the yearly race for the Heisman trophy. After all, who wants to vote for guys with cardboard names like Steve Young or Marcus Allen or even Herschel Walker? We've decided to push our own candidates for the Heisman. Since visibility is all-important in the Heisman hunt, we have gone in search of the most unique names from the Pacific-10 Conference's various rosters.

At first, we were going to push Roggy Pflug and Okeese Wilcots as our top two candidates, but we kept finding such great names (Neon Edwards, Onno Zwaneveld, Wally Wisner) that we decided to can the Heisman hunt and put together an All Pac-10 Name Team. Our humble endeavors follow.

At the rate Oregon is going, head football coach Rich Brooks should plead with the NCAA to allow him to redshirt the entire Oregon football team. The Ducks have watched a 3-3 record slip to 3-5 in the last two weeks, thanks in large part to a recent string of injuries that has hit hardest at the offensive line and the defensive secondary.

The injuries, when they occurred, and whether the player injured will see action against

UCLA this Saturday in Autzen Stadium:

Center Ryan Zinke: Injured right knee against Washington State and had to leave game. Doubtful for UCLA.

Guard Steve Jenson: Returned from leg infection against WSU, but twisted a knee and suffered a bruised shoulder. Questionable for UCLA.

Safety Jeff Williams: Broke right forearm against Washington. Out for the season.

Safety Doug Judge: Injured left knee against Arizona. Out for season.

Tackle Greg Schwab: Injured a knee against Arizona and had surgery last week. Out for the season.

Guard Craig Kaylor: Injured a shoulder in pre-season. Out for year.

Guard Gary Zimmerman: Played with a strained right knee against Washington State. Probable for UCLA.

Quarterback Mike Jorgensen: Broke little finger on left hand against California. Injured shoulder versus Washington. Doubtful for UCLA.

Quarterback Mike Owens: Suffered a concussion against Washington State. Probable for UCLA.

Defensive End Dale Dorning: Slight concussion versus Washington State. Probable for UCLA.

Defensive End Steve Baack: Slight knee injury against Washington State. Probable for UCLA.

We would like to thank our many friends from the campus area who helped make our first year successful
