

Ducks visit Stanford with 4-3 league mark in mind

When Oregon's football team lines up to play Stanford University Saturday in Palo Alto, Calif., there won't be anymore Rose Bowl talk about the Ducks.

Instead, Oregon (3-6, 2-3) against the Cardinal (1-8, 1-5) is being billed 'crummy game of the week' by 'Bottom Ten' syndicated columnist Steve Harvey, who lists the Cardinals as his No. 1 non-team.

Still, Oregon coach Rich Brooks thinks of this one as anything but a laughing matter. He wants to see the Ducks beat Stanford and Oregon State University to post a 4-3 Pac-10 mark.

"That would be a winning conference record," says Brooks, "and we'd be achieving something nobody predicted we would. If we go 4-3, we'll certainly be in the upper half of the conference."

Beating the Cardinal might be easier if the Ducks weren't an advertisement for crutches. The latest injury victim — starting

Without Jorgensen, the Ducks will use either Mike Owens or local freshman Chris Miller against Stanford.

Miller or Owens will try to get the ball to Oregon's Mr. Explosive, Lew Barnes.

The flanker has averaged 22.1 yards a reception and 15.8 a punt return (second in the nation) to cause opposing defenses a lot of sleepless nights. Offensive coordinator Bob Toledo and Brooks agree he needs to get the ball.

"It doesn't take a genius to figure that out," says Toledo. "We're continually figuring out ways to get it (the football) to him."

When Stanford is on offense, Oregon must keep an eye on freshman quarterback sensation John Paye.

"He has a lot of talent. All he needs is time to develop it," says Toledo.

Kickoff time in Palo Alto is 1 p.m. The Cardinal is rated a 1½ point favorite over the Ducks.

Hagler wins over Duran

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler, fighting a man he called "a legend," showed Thursday night what it takes to beat someone that good.

"I give him a lot of credit, but you've got to give me a lot of credit too," Hagler said after defending his undisputed middleweight crown with a unanimous, but close, 15-round decision over Roberto Duran.

"This man's a legend. I'm very proud of myself to beat a man with three world titles."

Hagler, who has longed for a big payday throughout his 62-fight professional career, said the money he earned for beating Duran — more than $5 million — made his entire boxing career worthwhile.

"The peanuts all paid off tonight. I knew one day I'd be there. I kept the faith. I guess tonight was the big money, eh?"

Hagler says he knew he had to win the final two rounds to retain his title.

"My manager and trainer told me, 'We got to win these big,'" Hagler said. "I couldn't see him beating me."

The winner

Dave Harding, a business administration/finance senior is the winner of the Nov. 3 Emerald "Trivia Time" sports quiz contest.

Answers: Oregon football never had losing season; worst Pac-10 loss was 58-0 to Washington in 1973; Lisa Gemoya (5-3) is Oregon volleyball's shortest player; Leann Warren was 107th at cross country nationals in 1980; Texas El-Paso has won seven NCAA cross country titles, not 12.
