Sandinistas take blame

MANAGUA — The leftist Sandinista government acknowledged that its troops shot down a U.S. Army helicopter and said it "deplores the incident." The Pentagon said the United States made an official protest, blaming Nicaragua for the death of the pilot.

Nicaragua's statement, issued late Wednesday, said the troops shot at a military helicopter that was inside Nicaraguan territory, but it carefully avoided any admission that the Nicaraguans had killed the American.

Officials in Washington and at the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, said the pilot, Chief Warrant Officer II Jeffery Schwab, of Joliet, Ill., was killed by "hostile fire" from Nicaragua after his helicopter made a forced landing Wednesday about 200 yards from the border — inside Honduras.

Government sources in Washington, who spoke on condition they not be named, said the helicopter was "blown off course" by a windstorm that pushed it near the Nicaraguan border.

Pres. Ronald Reagan called Schwab's death "a great tragedy."

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said in a CBS television news interview, "The indefensible thing is that the pilot was killed after he got out of the helicopter (and was) simply walking around."

Nicaragua expressed condolences to the family of the dead pilot.

"The Nicaraguan government hopes this incident, a direct result of the U.S. military presence in the area, will be the last in which the blood of North American soldiers is spilled in Central America," the Nicaraguan statement said.

The Sandinista statement blamed the Reagan administration for its support of Nicaraguan rebels based in Honduras.

It was the first such shooting episode since joint U.S.-Honduran military maneuvers began in August as a warning to the Sandinistas against supporting leftist rebels in Central America. The attack occurred in an area near which there has been heavy fighting between CIA-backed rebels and Sandinista troops.

Dalkon jury grants award

EUGENE — A woman was awarded $273,000 Thursday in a trial alleging serious harm from her use of the Dalkon Shield contraceptive.

Joanna Carlson of Eugene was awarded the money in the second of 13 cases being heard in U.S. District Court against A.H. Robins of Richmond, Va.

She testified that her use of the intrauterine device in the early 1970s caused extensive damage to her reproductive system.

On Saturday, a jury ruled in the first case that the device was "dangerously defective" but the $295,000 damage award was ruled out by Judge Robert Belloni. He said the plaintiff, Pamela Van Duyn of Portland, should have sought medical help sooner and had contributed to the problem by not doing so.

They looked so honest

PENDLETON — A honeymooning Oregon couple who endeared themselves to the Big Apple after saying they lost everything to a Times Square pickpocket may not be married, it was learned Thursday.

In addition, the man may have another wife. One group that helped the couple in New York now says it may have been hoodwinked, and New York police admitted the case was "getting screwier by the hour."

Michael and Diane Hoskins of Umapine told police they were married a month ago. They said they were honeymooning in

New York City when they lost $200 cash, their only credit card and return bus tickets to a pickpocket hours after their arrival Sunday.

A midtown hotel gave the couple a night's lodging and the Greyhound Bus Co. gave them free one-way tickets back to Oregon. They refused other offers of aid and insisted on considering the donations loans, not charity, and said they would repay their benefactors.

However, a woman who lives at Michael's uncle's house in Umapine said Michael and Diane may not be married. The woman said the Hoskins family asked her to speak for them, and she identified herself only as "Marge."

"If he got married to Diane he got married on the way," Marge said. "They weren't married when they left here. They were in New York for one day before they got robbed and Michael told people they had been married for a month."

Marge claims that he has a wife in Tallahassee, Fla., but the woman, Sue Hoskins, said she and Hoskins were divorced in May after being married since 1977.

And an Oregon woman says she is still married to Hoskins.

Violet Kay Hoskins, 26, of Pendleton said she has been married to Michael Hoskins of Umapine since 1974, although they separated in 1978, according to KATU-TV in Portland and The East Oregonian in Pendleton. She said they have two children.

Hoskins' mother, Mary Lou Hoskins of Umapine, would not comment on her son's marital status. His great-aunt, Luella Hoskins, said she believes Michael and Diane never married. "It's embarrassed the rest of the family here," Luella Hoskins said.

Marge said she thought the couple was on its way back to Oregon. "The family doesn't want to talk; they just want it dropped."

In New York, Laurel Scott of Travelers Aid Service said the couple traded in the tickets home and are "going to Florida."
