policies such as defense spending, Frank says.

Hatfield is a supporter of the pro-life movement, Frank says.

Hendriksen feels the only way to win the election is to make Oregonians aware of the issues on which she opposes Hatfield.

"My whole challenge is to mount the kind of campaign that will allow me to get his record out and present positive alternatives," Hendriksen says.

"The deficit is the over-riding issue. He (Hatfield) has voted for the tax cuts, which primarily benefit upper income groups. The leading factor of the deficit is the tax reduction," she says. "He's also supported the Reagan budget cuts, domestic programs for the most part, and as chair of the Appropriations Committee, he's in a leadership position and has implemented the Reagan program."

A 1975 graduate of the University Law School, Hendriksen thinks students would benefit if she were in office, she says.

"What students should know is that Mr. Hatfield voted against restoring money for student loans," Hendriksen says. "We (Oregonians) lost $200 million in the state General Fund in fiscal year '81-'82. Of that money, $100 million was in social services, $50 million was in education and the rest was sprinkled throughout the budget."

Hendriksen says Hatfield doesn't do a good job of representing the majority of Oregonians. She says Republican leadership has turned a deaf ear to the poor and unemployed.

"Mr. Hatfield has not opposed, and in many cases he has supported, cuts in unemployment benefits. He has only a 29 percent environmental rating and basically, he has voted many times for issues that have negatively impacted the majority of people in Oregon," Hendriksen says.

Greeks sponsor fund raiser

University fraternities will join in the fight against neuromuscular diseases at the fourth annual "All Fraternities Boxing Match" scheduled for Friday.

The competition, to be kicked off at 7 p.m. with a pre-tournament workout by the Eugene Amateur Boxing Association, will be held at the Eugene National Guard on 2515

Centennial Blvd.

Proceeds from the match will go to the Muscular Dystrophy Assoc. to be used for providing vital patient services, and research funding.

Phi Kappa Psi and Budweiser are co-sponsors and admission is $2.50. For information contact Chris Wheelright at 686-5276 or Pam Wilson at 686-2753.

University keeps custodians

The University does not intend to contract out custodial work, at least during the 1984-85 academic year, University Pres. Paul Olum told a meeting of about 70 custodians last week.

A combination of staff reductions made this year and new money-saving ideas being developed through the University-Oregon Public Employees Union Productivity Project is making it possible to continue handling custodial services with regular University employees, Olum said.

"The loyalty of University staff members has been a vital element in making this University the quality institution it is today," he said.

Physical Plant Director Harold Babcock said the University eliminated 15 custodial positions this year, resulting in annual savings of $300,000 per year. A total savings of $350,000 would put custodial costs at about the same level that outside contractors could be expected to bid, he said.
