Thrilling whitewater adventure is blended with scenes of Katmandu, the Himalayas and Tibetan nomads in the "First Descent of the Karnali," a multi-media show that will be presented Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the EMU Ballroom. The slide show, narrated by Outdoor Program Director Bruce Mason, follows the Eugene-based expedition's 55-day descent of one of the world's greatest whitewater challenges. Several year's of research prior to the trip revealed that there was virtually no information, photos or maps available on the Karnali region in far western Nepal. The river, never run before, was too long to scout beforehand, and too remote to permit the use of two-way radios for rescue. The river runners found themselves pushing off into the unknown with no chance of outside rescue if there was a problem, and little information on what lay ahead.

Water purification in the outdoors will be the topic of a presentation by Dr. John Wilson Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Room 107 Lawrence. Wilson will discuss the symptoms and treatment of diseases transmitted by contaminated waters and methods for treating wilderness water sources.

A slide show on cycling in the San Juan Islands in the state of Washington will kick off a three-day series of presentations on bike touring next week. On Tuesday, Keith Nelson of the University's Outdoor Program will present a slide show detailing a bike tour of Lopez, Shaw, Orcas and San Juan islands. Also slated is a discussion of future Outdoor Program cycling trips, including a June tour to the San Juan Islands.

RIM deadlines: Entries for racquetball (mixed doubles) are due Friday; matches begin on Saturday.
