Hart wins Ohio, Indiana

By the Associated Press

Sen. Gary Hart won the Ohio and Indiana primaries Tuesday night in a successful, now-or-never bid to slow Walter Mondale's drive for the Democratic presidential nomination. The former vice president took expected victories in North Carolina and Maryland.

Hart said dropping out of the race was now "the last thing on my mind."

He told supporters, "We love Indiana, and we think we're going to love Ohio." He added, "The Democrats of this nation are not prepared to have this contest and this debate end at this time."

His spokeswoman Kathy Bushkin said in understatement, "We needed to show we could win in a northern industrial state." Hart had not won a primary since the Connecticut vote on March 27.

Mondale said, "Apparently we have lost both contests (in the midwest) by a narrow margin." Win or lose, he said, "we've taken an important, significant step down the road to the nomination" by adding to his lead in convention delegates.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson was running second in Maryland and a strong third in North Carolina. Overall, he attracted three-quarters of the black vote, according to TV network interviews, but failed to garner significant white support.

"We continue to win many urban centers which are central to the Democratic party...our mission to expand the party continues," Jackson told reporters in Raleigh, N.C.

Ohio, with 154 delegates at stake, was the key for Hart. He needed a big-state victory following a string of defeats that culminated in Saturday's loss in Texas.

The four contests carried a prize of 368 delegates to the Democratic National Convention. Mondale was adding to his commanding lead over his rivals. With partial returns from all four states, he led for 186 delegates, Hart for 143 and Jackson for 37.

"The result in Ohio and Indiana is so close we don't know the outcome," Mondale told reporters late Tuesday night. "But we do know we've taken an important, significant step down the road to the nomination."

He began the day with 1,252.05 convention delegates, compared with 738.75 for Hart and 237.2 for Jackson. Those totals omitted Texas, where Mondale may have won 100 or more delegates on Saturday. It takes 1,967 delegates to win the nomination.

In Ohio, with 154 delegates at stake, Hart led for 81, Mondale for 65 and Jackson for 8. Hart had 42 percent of the popular vote, to 40 percent for Mondale and 17 percent for Jackson.

Hart's campaign manager, Oliver Henkel, earlier had called Ohio a potential "turnaround situation" if Hart could win, but conceded a defeat could produce "tremendous pressure" on the Colorado senator to quit the race.

There were 77 delegates at stake in Indiana, where Hart led for 39, Mondale for 34 and Jackson for four.
