Israeli jets hit Lebanon

BEIRUT — Israeli warplanes bombed and strafed targets in eastern Lebanon less than two miles from the Syrian border on Sunday and Israel said its pilots scored direct hits on a "terrorist base" for pro-Iranian Moslem extremists.

One Moslem was reported killed.

Beirut radio stations said the jets attacked positions around the villages of Janta, Deir el-Ghazal and Reit in the eastern Bekaa Valley, about 1.2 miles from Syria.

The area, which is occupied by Syrian troops, houses camps of Iranian Revolutionary Guards who came to Lebanon in 1982 to fight on the side of Palestinian guerrillas against Israeli occupation forces in south Lebanon.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said the target was a terrorist base near Janta. It said the pilots scored direct hits on buildings that served as a staging area for attacks, but did not say what group controlled the base. All planes returned safely, the command said.

Lebanese security sources and the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio station said a camp occupied by militiamen of Hezbollah was hit. Hezbollah — Party of God in Arabic — is made up of Lebanese Shiite Moslem fundamentalists who have been trained and armed by the Iranian Revolutionary Guards.

One of the militiamen was killed, said the security sources, speaking on condition they not be identified. They said militiamen would not disclose details about damage to the camp.

It was the 10th Israeli air strike in Lebanon this year. The last was April 7. The security sources said six planes were involved in the latest raid — three attacking while the other three circled above to provide cover. The type of aircraft was not disclosed.

Two hours earlier, at noon, an Israeli soldier was wounded in a grenade attack on an Israeli patrol in Sidon, a Lebanese port city 25 miles south of Beirut.

Reporters who arrived moments later saw an Israeli soldier with a bandage on his face and two wounded Lebanese.

Ill woman still held

MOSCOW — The government stepped up its publicity campaign Sunday against Yelena Bonner, wife of dissident Andrei Sakharov, calling her an embittered and greedy person who violated Soviet law and instigated her husband's hunger strike.

In its attack, the government newspaper Izvestia, confirmed that the Communist police were acting against Bonner and that Sakharov himself was "punished for anti-Soviet activities."

Sakharov, a 62-year-old physicist who won the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize, has been confined since 1980 to the closed city of Gorky in what Soviet officials usually portray as a measure designed to protect his poor health.

Friends say he began a hunger strike May 2, and that his wife reported he was taken from his home by authorities five days later. There has been no word on his current whereabouts or state of health.

Sakharov was fasting to pressure the government to let his wife, who suffers from a heart condition and eye ailment, leave the country for medical treatment. Bonner also began fasting on May 12, friends say, and authorities told her this month she is under investigation for anti-Soviet slander and cannot leave Gorky.

Izvestia blamed Bonner for Sakharov's dissident activities, calling her a "petty, embittered and greedy person who is ready to sell and betray everything and everybody for the sake of her own profit."

Riots kill 83 in India

BOMBAY, India — Army troops were sent into Bombay early Monday to quell Hindu-Moslem rioting that has killed at least 83 people, injured more than 200 and left thousands homeless in four days of bloodshed.

"Our forces were getting tired and we needed more men. The situation is very tense," said police spokesman P.M. Sawant.

He said more than 1,200 people have been arrested.

Police, with orders to shoot law-breakers on sight, killed six rioters and wounded five in Bombay's northeast Govandi section Sunday. Officials said mobs set fire to shops, homes and vehicles and hurled stones at trains and police.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi sent Home Affairs Minister Prakash Sethi to the riot-ravaged city of Bhiwandi, 35 miles northeast of Bombay, where more than 1,200 buildings were burned.

Violence continued late Sunday in Bombay, an Arabian Sea port city of 8.5 million, despite an 8 p.m.-to-5 a.m. curfew in several areas.

At least 21 people have been killed in Bombay since the sectarian battles began Thursday night in Bhiwandi. Police say 62 others perished in areas outside Bombay.
