Reagan policies flunk out at commencements

Pres. Ronald Reagan's military policies came under attack at commencement exercises Sunday as U.S. Rep. Thomas O'Neill called for a "truce to terror" in Central America and a Nobel Prizewinning historian pleaded for "revival of the art of diplomacy."

"It is time to try to reverse the violent trend of the last three years," O'Neill, a Massachusetts Democrat, said at the Stonehill College commencement in North Easton, Mass. "It is time to heed John Kennedy's words and call for a 'truce to terror."

O'Neill, the House speaker, suggested that the United States become a "supporting actor," and "wholeheartedly and vigorously" support peace talks between El Salvadoran President-elect Jose Napolean Duarte and the country's

At the State University of New York at Albany, historian Arthur Schlesinger focused his speech to about 2,770 graduates on the nuclear arms race and Reagan's "trigger-happy" foreign policy.

The Reagan administration "reaches instinctively for the gun," Schlesinger said, citing the recent conflicts in Lebanon, Grenada and Central America. It is time "for the revival of the art of diplomacy, for consultation with our allies, for the end of bluster, brag and bullying as our mode of dealing with the rest of the world," he

A University of Pennsylvania professor speaking at baccalaureate services Sunday said the Soviet Union would convey a frightening message against human rights, arms control and world peace if it allows dissident Andrei Sakharov to die.
