GOING TO GONZO?

There still are tickets available for tonight's "Evening of Questions and Answers Political in Nature with Dr. Hunter S. Thompson" in Mac Court. The question and answer session will begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are $3 for students, $4 for the general public.

Thompson's journalistic career consists of many strange and wondrous marvels since its inception in 1959 with a stint as a TIME magazine correspondent on the sweltering Caribbean beat. Thompson has been a contributing editor to Rolling Stone, High Times and other national publications. Thompson is best known for his "Fear and Loathing" books and the Doonesbury character "Duke," modeled on Thompson's lifestyle.

This question and answer session with Thompson from his unique and seldom seen point-of-view is a once-in-a-lifetime occurrence brought to the University by the EMU Cultural Forum. Tickets are available at the EMU Main Desk and other outlets.

And remember — you said you'd buy them when we asked.

CPR course offered

CPR Lifeline will be offering an American Heart Association certified cardiopulmonary resuscitation course Thursday.

The course will be taught by an emergency medical technician and will include information on the two types of rescue CPR as well as airway obstruction aid.

The cost of the course is $10. It will be held at the Eugene Clinic at 1162 Willamette Street from 6 to 10 p.m. in the doctor's dining room.

Preregistration is required. For more information, call the CPR Lifeline at 726-9692.

Folklorist will speak

Germany's most distinguished folklorist will talk about the importance of identity, Thursday, in a free public lecture, 7:30 p.m., 167 EMU.

Hermann Bausinger, University Tubingen professor, will talk about the meaning of ethnic, national and group identity, why the concept has become so important and how folklore is related.

The event is sponsored by the Folklore and Ethnic Studies program.
