Iran warns Arabs, U.S.

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iran's president pledged on Tuesday to fight any U.S. military intervention in the Persian Gulf and said Arab states that don't remain neutral in the Iran-Iraq conflict risk retaliation.

His comments came on the day the State Department confirmed Pres. Ronald Reagan sent 400 Stinger anti-aircraft missiles and a KC-10 tanker plane to Saudi Arabia to improve Saudi defenses against attacks on Persian Gulf shipping.

"If the Americans are prepared to sink in the depths of the Persian Gulf waters for nothing, thousands of miles away from their country, then let them come," Pres. Ali Khamenei told Iranian officers and troops at the port town of Bandar Abbas, near the Strait of Hormuz.

Iran and Iraq, fighting a 44-month war, began attacking civilian vessels in the gulf in April. The attacks, mostly on oil tankers, have slowed oil exports from the gulf.

International concern has centered on the Strait of Hormuz, the narrow southern entrance to the Persian Gulf through which 20 percent of the non-Communist world's oil flows. The United States has vowed to keep the strait open if Iran tries to close it.

The American arms shipments were to bolster Saudi Arabian defenses in the gulf region. State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said Americans will train the Saudis to fire the missiles, but it will be up to the Saudis to decide where to deploy them.

Iraq, seeking to reduce Iran's oil revenue, declared a blockade zone around Iran's main oil terminal at Kharg Island and attacked shipping in the area. Iran, retaliating for the Iraqi attacks, has conducted air raids against shipping in the southern sector of the gulf.

under an international treaty that permits such activity. Above-ground nuclear tests are forbidden under international law.

Job closed to women

SALEM — Cultural differences justify excluding women in recruiting someone to head Oregon's new trade office in Japan, Gov. Vic Atiyeh's affirmative action officer says.

Kay Toran said Tuesday that while it normally would be illegal to discriminate in hiring based on sex, the practice was proper in the case of the overseas trade office because of Japanese traditions.

Business officials say women in Japan have made gains but still hold second-class status.

"Because it's in a different country with a different culture and different traditions, I think it's appropriate and would hold up in a court of law if one takes sex into consideration," Toran said.

The Legislative Emergency Board last week authorized spending $250,000 to open the office at a site already chosen in Tokyo.

Toran said her office had not received any complaints about the fact that no women were considered for the trade office job.

US detects nuclear test

WASHINGTON — A Soviet underground nuclear test, the sixth reported by U.S. officials this year, was detected late last week, the Energy Department said Tuesday.

Department spokesman Jim Cannon said the U.S. Atomic Energy Detection System discovered seismic signals presumably caused by the test at 11:13 p.m. EDT Friday.

He said the signals were traced to the Semipalatinsk nuclear test area in Siberia.

The United States has announced four underground nuclear tests of its own this year

What famous writers think who've eaten at Burton's

Ernest Hemingway: "A well-lighted place!"

F. Scott Fitzgerald: "Had Gatsby ever eaten one of Burton's hamburgers he wouldn't have wound up in that pool."

Gertrude Stein: "A hamburger is not a hamburger unless you've eaten at Burton's!"

Eugene O'Neill: "I don't see how Burton's makes any profit with his prices. He should turn off some of those lights and save on his electric bill"

Robert Frost: "The best road I ever conquered was when I jumped my neighbor's fence and went to Burton's for a double-cheese burger."

EDITOR'S NOTE: We talked to Mr. Burton about the authenticity of the above quotes and his rather glib rejoinder was: "So I lied a little!"
