projects.

"Students need to unionize," he says. Snyder says the seasonal nature of university study, as well as the economic standing of students in general, makes creditors wary of considering young academics for loans. "You (students) don't exist again until fall," he says.

As well as needing low-cost financing, Snyder says students desperately need inexpensive travel arrangements and health insurance, which would help eliminate the "excess fretting of getting injured or ill."

But such plans will have to wait. For now, Snyder's center of attention will be expanding USSA. And after that goal is accomplished, Snyder says the duties of a student await him.

"I'm not going to throw four years of education down the tubes," he says with a smile. "I may go on and get that piece of paper and shock my mother."

Snyder will remain active in USSA after the trip is completed, he says, as the organization's second-year veterans caucus and regional representative on the USSA board of directors. Board members are required to attend three other USSA meetings throughout the coming year. Snyder will also be developing programs relating to veteran's needs as students, he says.

Road Warrior to appear on lawn this evening

Attention film lovers, punkers, hackers, etc. Due to its success at the box offices of major theatres, "Repo Man," which was scheduled to be shown on campus tonight, has been yanked from 16mm distribution to colleges and similar organizations.

Hence, "The Road Warrior" will be shown in its place. The film will be shown on the EMU lawn at 9 p.m. In case of rain, the showing will take place indoors.

The EMU Cultural Forum is sponsoring the screening.
