

team that is famous for winning in the second half of the season.

The only problem for WSU is they must win early this season or not win all. The Cougars' schedule isn't kind. WSU does have the best runner in the Pac-10 in Kerry Porter.

Mark Rypien, a local favorite, will handle the quarterbacking chores, but it is the depleted defense which will be the Cougar's demise.

8. STANFORD

Things haven't looked so good down at the Farm since John Elway took his act to the NFL two years ago. Stanford's search for Pac-10 respectability stems from another Elway, Jack, who takes over the coaching reins in Palo Alto.

The apprentice to Elway's offensive magic will be sophomore signal caller John Paye who will throw to fleet-footed Emile Harry.

Besides the Paye-Harry show on Saturdays, Stanford opponents will be seeing a lot of 6-6 250-pound defensive end Garin Veris on the defensive front.

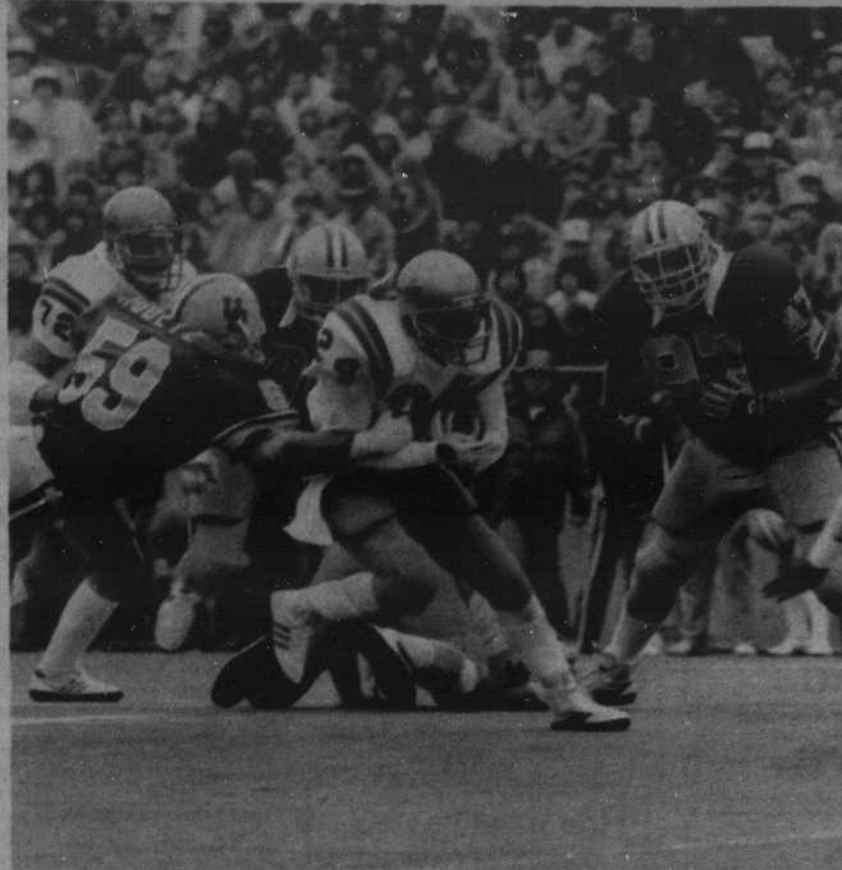

Elway's team is by no means a contender for the crown because of a non-existent running game. However, the days of not taking Stanford seriously are over.

9. OREGON STATE

Pity the poor Beavers. Oregon State is an avalanche waiting to happen as beleaguered coach Joe Avezzano fights for his coaching life.

Avezzano's prayers will rest on shoulders of quarterback Rickey Greene who will be looking for All-Pac-10 wide receiver Reggie Bynum.

OSU has a seasoned defensive unit (eight starters back) to combat the offenses of the Pac-10. Avezzano's troops will be improved, but the rigors of the long Pac-10 season will take their toll.

10. CALIFORNIA

California is the mystery team of the Pac-10. The Bears could finish anywhere from the upper echelon of the conference to dead last.

The only thing not mysterious is quarterback Gale Gilbert who will operate the "Air Cal" passing machine. Cal will live — and die by the pass. Only three starters are back from a defense which finished eighth in the league. A defensive miracle will be the only thing that will prevent "Air Cal" from crash landing in Berkeley.
