

Classic pianist performs at Hult

By Kim Carlson

Eugene audiences will be treated to an evening of classical piano Sunday at 7:30 p.m. when renowned composer and musician Adam Kapuscinski performs a benefit concert for the Oregon Natural Resources Council, at the Hult Center.

Kapuscinski will bring to the Soreng Theatre a program of works by Mozart, Beethoven, Gluck, Bach, Chopin and Liszt. The pianist's own compositions, "Lullaby" and "Variations on a theme by Piagini," will close the recital.

Kapuscinski began studying piano in Poland at the age of six, under the tutelage of Alexandre Michalowski, a pupil of Franz Liszt. Kapuscinski graduated from the Warsaw Conservatory in 1937, and within two years established himself as a concert pianist in Europe. Preparations for a U.S. tour were halted by the German invasion of Poland.

With the outbreak of World War II, Kapuscinski was interned by the Germans. He escaped Nazi imprisonment, and fled to eastern Poland, then occupied by the Soviet Union. Falling into the hands of the Soviet armed forces, Kapuscinski performed recitals throughout the Soviet Union for two and one-half years.

After Germany and the Soviet Union went to war, Kapuscinski joined the new Polish army. As a soldier he was sent to perform in Iran and Russia, and eventually became the piano teacher for the Shah of Iran's family. A gold medal from the shah was given to Kapuscinski in recognition of his outstanding musical contributions.

At the urging of pianist Arthur Rubenstein, Kapuscinski immigrated to the United States in 1960 under the sponsorship of the Tolstoy Foundation. Virtually retired, Kapuscinski recently moved to Oregon to be near his son and daughter.

Kapuscinski says he takes a special pleasure in performing benefit concerts on behalf of numerous charitable organizations. At the invitation of Jehan Sadat, wife of Egypt's late president, Anwar Sadat, Kapuscinski performed two recitals in Cairo to benefit the United Nation's International Year of the Child.

Except for the flush of publicity surrounding the invitation to Egypt, Kapuscinski has managed to live outside of the celebrity spotlight while teaching and performing.

His appreciation of the wild beauty of Oregon's lands and waters inspired him to do Sunday's benefit recital. Proceeds from that event will support ONRC's work to reserve "what remains wild and spectacular in Oregon."

Marines show film

The U.S. Marine Corps will show a free movie on the history of Marine aviation tonight, at 7 p.m., in Room 184 PLC. After almost 50 years of air support for ground troops, the Marines maintain one of the largest tactical air forces in the world. Marines fly a variety of sub and supersonic jet aircraft, prop-planes and helicopters.

Programs for aviation supervisory positions include pilot, flight officer, aircraft maintenance officer, aeronautical engineer and flight equipment officer training.

The Marines offer a six-week summer training course for freshmen, sophomores and juniors interested in becoming officers.

Starting pay for Marines upon graduation is $1,772.20 per month plus benefits. For more information visit the Marine Corps information table in the EMU.

The ASUO Survival Center is sponsoring a photography contest in conjunction with World Week for Wildlife, which is Oct. 21 through 27.

Black and white or color photos of flora and fauna can be brought to the Survival Center office, Suite 1 EMU, no later than noon on Monday. Photos will be displayed in the center's lobby Tuesday through Friday.

Entries will be judged on originality, naturalness and composition. Winners will receive a Survival Center T-shirt.

World Week for Wildlife was established by the National Mobilization for Animals. The organization works to make the public aware of the trapping and destruction of animals, according to a spokesperson for the center.
