SOUTHERN COMFORT
Highly reminiscent of "Deliverance", this fast-moving thriller is about a troop of Weekend National Guardsmen on maneuvers in a Louisiana swamp who face the wrath of otherwise peaceful Cajun poachers after foolishly firing on them with their blank-loaded machine guns. The grisly death scenes contrast highly with Andrew Laszlo's beautiful cinematography. Directed by Walter Hill. "A metaphor of military impotence" (Village Voice)

THE ONION FIELD
Based on a true incident in which two small time crooks kidnapped two police officers, drove them to an onion field, and executed one of them. The other escaped and identified the killers. Then the American judicial system took over for seven years. Directed by Harold Becker.
