Parade to tie campus, city

Once again, it's Homecoming and University students and community members are gearing up for the Town and Gown Light Parade.

The parade, which begins Friday at 6:30 p.m. and features 20 entries from 30 community and student organizations, will be followed by a pep rally at the Downtown Mall.

One of the purposes of the event is to "restore and establish a tradition" says Phil Super, Alumni Association executive director.

During the 1950s and early '60s, before student participation in Homecoming lagged, the event was known as the "Noise Parade."

"The purpose was to make as much noise as possible," Super explains. "One year, Ken Kesey's group had a WWII air raid siren. He claims they broke the windows out in the Fishbowl. They won that year."

Today, says Super, parade organizers are attempting to bridge the gap between students and the community with events like the Homecoming

"The more the community sees of the students, the less apt they are to make generalizations about them," Super says. "And the students could become more tolerant of some of the things community members say."

Also, community members help fund the parade, while students supply the time and effort, Super adds.

The intention is to match each student group with a community group on the parade floats. One float consists of a 45-foot flatbed truck, Super says.

He says the response from community members and students was higher than anticipated — about twice that of last year.

"We want to encourage people to come to the rally," Super says. "It's for students, for the family and it's a fun celebration."

Twenty floats enhance parade

This year's annual Homecoming parade is expected to outdo that of last year's street gala with three times the number of floats, and many will be more than 40 feet long, says Charles Van Duyn, the event chair.

The handful of entries in last year's parade is expected to be bettered Friday by a combined total of 20 floats, musical acts and other assorted groups, Van Duyn says. More than 30 community organizations have banded together to produce these, he adds.

Some of the unlikely combinations of efforts include a 45-foot float crafted and manned by the Eugene Chamber of Commerce Greeters Committee, the Traditional Jazz Society and the Student University Relations Council, he says.

The Pearl Buck Center and Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, as well as Sam's Tavern's East End Zone Zanies and Pi Beta Phi sorority, also have joined their creative powers for the event.

The parade will begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday at the intersection of East 15th Avenue and Moss Street. The procession will take a twisting three-mile route through the University area and end at the Downtown Mall overpark, where the final float reviews will be held.

Van Duyn adds that most of the floats will be lighted, as the one-hour parade begins after dusk.
