Homecoming tradition prevails

By Mike Sims
Of the Emerald

Despite a de-emphasis on Homecoming at many colleges and universities, the basics of the century-old tradition remain intact wherever Homecoming festivities are held annually. And at many schools, the traditional Homecoming football game continues to be a high point of the week.

For many fans, the Homecoming contest is just another football game — both bag-encumbered students who trek across the foot-bridge for each home game and season-ticket holders with no University ties save an affinity for Duck sports.

But for those alums who make the annual Homecoming pilgrimage from Los Angeles or Lake Oswego, Baker or Bonn, the once-a-year look at the gridders of "Mighty Oregon" is a unique experience.

And there have been many memorable Duck Homecoming games. The 1933 contest against Oregon State, played in Portland on Armistice Day, when "Prink" Callison's team defeated OSC's fabled "Ironmen" 13-3. Thirty years later, the Ducks ended the "Homecoming That Wasn't" by clobbering the Beavers 31-14 in a game that had been postponed after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Some old-timers may recall the 9-0 win over the Beavers in 1919, capping a Homecoming weekend that saw the dedication of Hayward Field. Many of them also were present for the 1966 Homecoming game, when Washington State defeated the Ducks 14-13 in the last game played on Hayward Field.

Some of them were present the following year for the first Autzen Stadium Homecoming, when the Ducks threw a scare at eighth-ranked OSU.

Defense

and 29 points to Southern California in successive weeks. "We haven't had that dominating player on defense like we had in (Keith) Millard last year."

Both teams had problems with their kicking games last week. Oregon had one punt blocked and another returned for a touchdown. WSU had two punts blocked — one for a touchdown and another that set up a later score.

"They have had some kicking game problems like us," Brooks says. "It has made the defense look worse than it is."

Walden has been working on the Cougars' weakness in practice this week.

"We have been spending a lot of time on the kicking game," he says. "If we don't get that straightened out, it will be a big-scoring football game. It seems like we are giving two touchdowns a week in our own kicking game."

Walden doesn't want WSU to fall behind Oregon early. "I just don't want to be 28 points behind with fifteen minutes to play," he said after the Stanford cliffhanger. "It has been kind of excruciating the past couple of weeks."
