

State college enrollment falls

From the Associated Press

Enrollment at Oregon's eight public colleges and universities exceeds the forecast, but is still down slightly from last year, according to fourth-week statistics.

Shrinking high school graduating classes and Oregon's continued economic slump are being blamed for similar enrollment declines this year at most of the state's community colleges.

After a month of classes, total enrollment at the eight colleges and universities stands at 58,740, four-tenths of a percent below the same point last year.

Officials had predicted a 1.5 percent drop.

Western Oregon State College had a 12.3 percent increase, followed by the University at 1.6 percent and Southern Oregon State College at 0.1 percent.

Enrollment fell at the other five schools. The Oregon Health Sciences University is down the most at 4.5 percent, followed by the Oregon Institute of Technology and Oregon State University at 3.1 percent. Eastern Oregon State College declined 3 percent and Portland State University fell six-tenths of a percent.

The University of Oregon, with 15,749 students, is the largest state university. Oregon State University is second at 15,624 and PSU third at 14,749. Figures show SOSC at 4,281, WOSC at 2,882, OIT at 2,615, EOSC at 1,508 and OHSU at 1,185.

The fall's fourth week, which ended Oct. 19, is the official census data used for reporting enrollment figures, according to Susan Weeks of the State System of Higher Education.

Figures also showed that full-time-equivalent enrollment is down 9 percent at Lane Community College in Eugene.

"Enrollment, although down, is not an indication of impending doom," said Jack Carter, LCC vice president for student services. "Enrollment is related to population, the economy and so forth. It is somewhat predictable and the information we have about the population of our area indicates it would tend to level off."

At LCC, administrators have cut low-enrollment courses and combined classes. They've hired fewer instructors to offset a steeper-than-expected enrollment drop of about 9 percent.

Mondale slates Portland stop

PORTLAND (AP) — Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale will speak Monday at Portland State University in his second campaign appearance in Oregon.

Mondale is scheduled to speak at 9 a.m. at the university's gymnasium. The event is open to the public.

With this appearance, Mondale and his running mate, Geraldine Ferraro, will have campaigned in Oregon on five occasions. Ferraro has visited three times, the latest being Friday, when she appeared in Medford, Eugene, and Portland.

President Ronald Reagan has appeared once in Medford and Portland, and Vice Pres. George Bush has visited the state twice this campaign season.

Mondale was scheduled to arrive Sunday night from California. He was to leave late Monday morning for Seattle.

FOR 1984 AND THE FUTURE

Sanity In Foreign Policy and National Defense

Mondale supports a freeze on nuclear weapons, negotiated political solutions to problems in Central America and the Middle East

Cutting Deficits To Lower Interest Rates

Reagan's continued deficits threaten Oregon and the nation's economic future

Fairness In Taxation

Under Reagan, the poorest fifth of Americans lost 8% of real income. The richest fifth gained 9%

Protection Of Women's Rights

Reagan opposes ERA and women's rights to choose

Federal Funding for Education

Mondale will restore funding for student financial aid, for basic and applied research, for programs for excellence in education

A Just Supreme Court

Prevent Reagan from stacking the Court with anti-civil liberties, anti-women's rights conservatives
