Bad weather, curvy roads can put damper on holiday

Too often, holiday travel plans are complicated or ruined by hazardous winter road conditions. Awareness of the roads that are most likely to be affected by the weather can help save time and perhaps even a Thanksgiving or Christmas vacation.

In Oregon, all trans-Cascade roads should be viewed with suspicion during the winter. Such routes in the Eugene-Springfield area include the McKenzie and Santiam highways (Oregon 126 and U.S. 20) over the Santiam Pass between the Willamette Valley and Central Oregon, and the Willamette Highway (Oregon 58) through Oakridge and over the Willamette Pass to Klamath Falls.

Other Cascade routes that often are rendered hazardous by snow and ice include:

- Interstate 84 through the Columbia Gorge between Portland and The Dalles.

- The Mount Hood Loop (U.S. 26 and Oregon 35) between Sandy and Hood River, and U.S. 26 between Government Camp and Prineville.

- Oregon 22 between Salem and the Santiam Pass.

- Oregon 126 between Sisters and Prineville.

- The North Umpqua Highway (Oregon 138) between Roseburg and Crater Lake National Park.

- The Lake of the Woods Highway (Oregon 140) and Oregon 66 between the Medford-Ashland area and Klamath Falls.

Interstate 5 contains three major winter trouble spots, located at the Canyon Creek and Sexton Mountain passes between Roseburg and Grants Pass; and through the Siskiyou Mountains between Ashland and Redding, Calif.

Virtually all highways in Central and Eastern Oregon can be considered potentially dangerous during the winter. The most heavily-traveled routes include:

- Interstate 84 — Most key trouble spots outside of the Columbia Gorge are found along this route in northeastern Oregon, from Pendleton east through La Grande and Baker to the Idaho border.

- U.S. 97 between the Columbia River and the California border.

- U.S. 26 between Prineville and Vale.

- U.S. 20 between Bend and Ontario.

- Oregon 39, California 139 and U.S. 395 between Klamath Falls and Reno, Nev.

Coast Range routes are not as susceptible to ice and snow as the high mountain roads, but wind, rain and numerous worm-like curves often throw a "curve" into a holiday drive to the beach.

Area Coast Range routes include Route 'F' (Oregon 126) between Eugene and Florence; Oregon 36 between Junction City and Mapleton; Oregon 38 between Drain and Reedsport; U.S. 20 and Oregon 34 between Corvallis and the Newport-Waldport area; and Oregon 42 between Roseburg and Coos Bay.

The Oregon State Police offer a 24-hour toll-free telephone "hotline" for up-to-date winter road conditions: 1-800-821-6999.

In addition, Eugene radio stations all air frequent winter road advisories.

WHAT IS AUTO DETAILING?

Detailing is...The meticulous cleaning, pampering and renewing of your automobile's appearance. It enhances the joy of driving and owning a clean machine; with the resultant increase in value of your very prized possession.

- ★ Three steps of preparation including removing old wax, oxidation and surface scratches. All done by hand.
- ★ Plus chrome, tires, wire wheels, mag & alloy wheels, rubber mouldings, vinyl tops—all chemically cleaned and dressed for protection against ozone, ultraviolet rays and oxygen.
- ★ Polishing the clean surface to a bright shine. All done by hand.
- ★ At the end of the day you pick up your MASTERPIECE.
- ★ Two coats of Paste Wax and buffing. All by hand.

the color of your choosing. Again, follow closely the directions on the can. All painting steps should be done in a well-ventilated area. Multiple thin coats will give a smoother finish than fewer thicker coats.

While this treatment won't create the illusion of a new paint job, it will prevent further decay.
