Author to discuss child abuse book

The University Bookstore will close National Children's Book Week on Saturday with a talk by a celebrated local author on the subject of child abuse. Marcia Morgan will discuss her book "My Feelings" with children between 3 and 8 years old and their parents.

The presentation will be held from 11 a.m. to noon, and is part of the Children's Saturday Celebrations at the bookstore, a community outreach for children, says Francie McGeough, children's-books buyer.

Morgan's talk is the fifth event of the series. An hour of magic, mask-making for Halloween, a Winnie the Pooh celebration and a Beatrix Potter day have filled previous Saturday celebrations.

Though the Bookstore will be closed the Saturday after Thanksgiving, the series will resume the following Saturday with a greeting-card making day, and end for the season Dec. 8 with a "Nutcracker" reading hour.

Children and their parents are invited back winter term, when the series will begin again.

Weaver to speak on campus today

Oregon Democratic Congressman Jim Weaver will visit campus today to address a University class titled "War in the Nuclear Age" at 1:30 p.m. in Room 142 Straub.

Weaver will take questions and answers from students and will discuss present conditions facing the United States.

Class instructor Joe Austin has invited all interested students to attend and take part in what he says should be an interesting and informative session.

Weaver represents Oregon's 4th Congressional District, which includes Lane and Douglas counties. He is labeled a maverick by some critics because of his strong support of issues such as the environment and the nuclear freeze.

In the Nov. 6 election, Weaver defended his five-term service against Republican challenger Bruce Long, a Douglas County commissioner.
