

Set sail for study and adventure on a floating campus

Do exotic ports in faraway places sound like an enticing break from everyday Oregon rain?

Does it also seem an unlikely consideration for the student trying to get through school as quickly as possible?

Semester-at-Sea, a study-abroad program based on the "floating campus" of the U.S.S. Universe, enables students to travel while going to school.

Twice each year, the ship sails on a 100-day voyage for Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Sri Lanka, India, Egypt, Turkey, Greece and Spain.

The program offers a broad-based liberal arts program with more than 60 courses emphasizing world problems. Typically, a student takes four courses for a total of 12 hours. Academic credit is earned through the University of Pittsburgh and transferred to home campuses.

Students spend equal amounts of time aboard ship and in the various ports of call, exploring the history, culture, government and customs of each country. Classes meet only while at sea and each port visit lasts from three to seven days.

The U.S.S. Universe is equipped with classrooms, a bookstore, a student union, a library, a theatre and a gym. A spokesperson for the program described the set-up as the "best way to take a college campus around the world."

The program is not without a high pricetag, however. One term costs $8,900, including both room and board, passage and tuition. Any full-time student with a 2.5 or better grade point average is eligible to apply.

Applications are still being accepted for spring term 1985. Information is available by calling (800) 854-0195 or writing Semester-at-Sea, University of Pittsburgh, 2E Forbes Quadrangle, Pittsburgh, PA, 15260.
