

Winter brings extra cars to park

With the onset of winter, more students and staff at the University will forgo walking to campus in favor of driving, and there are many parking situations to choose from.

Last winter, approximately 1,700 students bought parking permits at the University, while 2,435 faculty and staff members bought permits, say Campus Security officials.

Parking lots on campus are divided between students and staff, with main student parking located southeast of campus on East 15th Avenue and Moss Street.

Faculty and staff parking is located on various lots throughout the campus.

Winter term parking in these lots for students costs $12 for the first car and $4 for the second. Faculty and staff must pay $24 for the first car and $8 for an additional vehicle.

Local filmmaker to exhibit work

Tamanhawis Illahee (Medicine Land), a film by Springfield filmmaker Ron Finne, will show Friday at Harris Hall on East 8th Avenue and Oak Street.

Made possible in part by the Oregon Committee for the Humanities, the film is a lyrical telling of the collision between Native American and European mythologies in the Pacific Northwest. In making the film, Finne consulted University professors Edwin Bingham (history) and Glen Love (literature).

Movie admission is free.

make predictions for the future, which include the destruction of personal civil rights, a U.S. invasion of Nicaragua, a rise in unemployment and a rise in taxes, according to their statement of beliefs run in an Emerald letter to the editor Tuesday.

"This is going to be an 'I told you so organization,'" Taylor said, pointing out that part of the education of the Yummie audience will be illustrating the problems of society.

Something has to be done "before we get more TV shows like Love Boat, Fantasy Island and, God forbid, Finder of Lost Loves," Taylor said.

But indecision ran rampant among the group, who couldn't even decide if they want to have leaders or not. After a lengthy discussion over the need — or lack of need — to have "officials," the issue was dropped after several members said the group should be a name for people who take individual action.

They have, however, taken a definite stand on their name.

Originally designed to stand for "young, upwardly mobile Marxists," that meaning was dropped because it was too leftist. But the title "Yummie" remained.

But only because "it was cute," Taylor said.
