Noon rally set at Capitol

Members of 25 Oregon organizations will kick off the 63rd legislative session Monday with a rally on the steps of the state Capitol.

The "Put the People First" rally will be held at noon at the Court Street entrance of the Capitol. Speakers will include state Sen. Margie Hendriksen, Irv Fletcher of the AFL-CIO and Ron Herndon of the Black United Front.

A legislative advocacy workshop is scheduled for 9 a.m. in Senate Room 343. Topics of the workshop include "How a Bill Becomes Law," "Testifying Before a Committee," and "Working with the Media."

"The Put People First rally will let the legislators know about the needs of low-income people and what their legislative agendas are," says Anne Riley of the Oregon Human Rights Coalition. "The 25 groups represent thousands of Oregonians concerned about welfare for two-parent unemployed families, rights of utility customers, women's rights, providing jobs and job training, fair taxation, services for children and many other issues."

The groups represented include Clergy and Laity Concerned, Citizen Action for Lasting Security, ASUO and others.

Free transportation and child care are available. For more information, contact ASUO at 686-3724.

OSL puts Atiyeh's budget on top of its priority list

The Oregon Student Lobby board of directors will meet Saturday to hear a staff report on its top legislative priority this year — Gov. Vic Atiyeh's recommended 1985-87 budget and tax relief package.

Atiyeh's budget is of particular interest to the OSL this year because it does not include a tuition freeze, said Rebecca Roby, ASUO state affairs coordinator.

At the same meeting, Sen. Margie Hendriksen will make a presentation to the board on tax structure in the state of Oregon. Her report will focus on the general "climate of the sales tax" and how it relates to higher education, Roby said.

The board will also hear a staff report on the feasibility of allowing student access to teacher evaluations. The University Senate approved a Student Advisory Board motion Wednesday to form an ad-hoc committee to study the student access issue. Today, the board is "more in favor" of allowing student access to the evaluations than they were in the past, Roby said.

The meeting is scheduled to start at 10 a.m. in the Oregon Student Lobby conference room at 573 Union St. N.E. in Salem.
